The Carmel Pine Cone

and Carmel Valley Outlook

OUR 73ND YEAR, NO. 1

January 8, 1987

IT WAS democracy in action Tuesday night as the Carmel City Council approved a resolution to move forward with the Carmel

Beach Restoration Project Phase II, as requested by voter sentiment. The $750,000 project will shore up the bluffs on Scenic Road (above), and provide better access to the beach. In adopting the architect's conceptual plans, the council also gave the go-ahead in its application process for a $200,000 state grant from the Coastal Conservancy for funding. (Holly McFarland photo.)

Overwhelming public support

Council gives go-ahead for scenic walkway

By DAVID LELAND

ECHOING AN overwhelming public sentiment, the Carmel City Council Tuesday adopted a resolution giving the go-ahead for the $750,000 Carmel Beach Restoration Project Phase II. At the same time, the council gave a thumbs-up for furthering its application process for a $200,000 state grant to help fund the project.

In approving the resolution (4-1) the council expressed a strong show of unanimity, which the California Coastal Conservancy had required as one of the stipulations for the grant.

But the voters of Carmel had been so vocal in their support of the project, which will provide a landscaped walkway with benches and access stairway along Scenic Road, that Doug Schmitz, city administrator, told one member of Tuesday's audience that unanimity was not a crucial factor at this time.

The opposing vote on the council belonged to Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, who would not budge from her position of representing the "25 percent who don't want the project."

Laiolo referred to a survey, conducted last week by Mayor Clint Eastwood, which showed about 73 percent of the respondents favoring the project and accepting the grant.

Previously, voters had expressed approval for the project at a Town Hall meeting in November and a poll conducted by the The Pine Cone in December.

Laiolo expressed doubts to the council regarding new development of the walkway, which she said should be included in the city's capital improvement plan. She also said she fears the coastal conservancy will put stipulations on the project once it becomes involved.

But other councilmembers were ready to cast aside speculation and proceed with the project.

"I keep hearing about the grant like it were an ugly dragon," said Councilman Bob Fischer. Fischer added this is not the first time Carmel has applied for outside help to fund a city project.

When with the Carmel Police Department eight years ago, Fischer said he applied for and received a $42,000 grant for equipment. Except for the quarterly reports, he said there were no hidden stipulations in receiving the money.

Perhaps the mood of the majority of the council in carrying the people's mandate can best be summed up by Councilman Bob Evans' comments.

"I learned to count at an early age," he said, referring to the three-to-one margin favoring the beach restoration project.

FOR THOSE expecting to see construction begin immediately on the beach project, it would be best to temper any enthusiasm for the time being, according to Greg D'Ambrosio, director of administrative services.

What the council OK'd was conceptual drawings of the walkway, D'Ambrosio said, now the architect will begin working drawings.

But first, the Beach Task Force will gather to consider what it regards as design priorities. Its next meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 15, in the city council chambers.

In Eastwood's recent survey the beach project is described as replacing present beach accessways and adding natural vegetation to help stabilize the bluffs. Also, a pedestrian trail, benches and drinking fountains will be added where the bluff is too narrow. The current plan provides for 102 parking spaces.

D'Ambrosio said with all of the preparation which needs to be done, the city "won't be breaking ground before the end of the year."

The next step in the city's quest for the $200,000 grant from the Coastal Conservancy is to forward the resolution approved by the council.

Previously, in a letter to Carmel written by Reed Holderman, conservancy project coordinator, the city was told it could expect an answer by February or March.

D'Ambrosio said he believes the beach project is just the sort of undertaking the conservancy likes to fund.

"The conservancy is interested in coastal access," he said. "That's the sort of stuff they are going to fund."

Much of the beach restoration project concerns access to the beach for both pedestrians and the handicapped.

There was some concern at Tuesday's council meeting that the conservancy was using federal funds for its treasury, but D'Ambrosio said its coffers are filled only with state-collected tax revenue.

Also the council was somewhat concerned about the conservancy tearing down the four stairways already built by the city which access the beach, but were built under temporary conditions.

D'Ambrosio said the city will apply for a permanent permit to keep the stairways as they are.

Sierra Club gives thanks

Dear Editor:

The Conservation Committee of the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club wishes to express its appreciation to Mayor Clint Eastwood for his purchase of Mission Ranch to preserve it as an historic site. We understand that this purchase will also serve to protect a minimum of eight acres of wetlands adjacent to the Carmel River Lagoon. This acreage is a valuable complement to the lagoon which was accorded Natural Preserve status in 1985.

We also commend Eastwood's decision to look to the Carmel Heritage for direction and for the best utilization of the property.

Save Flanders Mansion

Dear Editor:

In 1980 a group called Old Carmel rallied around an effort to "Save the Village Corner." This and much more was accomplished.

"Save the Flanders Mansion" is the sound of today. The city of Carmel does not need money from this sale. Good public use for this fine old building can be found.

I hope the city council has all the data and understands the will of the residents prior to going ahead with any sale.

An ode to Monday

Dear Editor:

O blessed Monday!—It follows Sunday, Which used to be the one day For rest and quiet, friends and worship, And all the joys of village peace.

But now THEY stream in, six long days, They drive and crowd and hoot their horrid horns, All sorts of tongues and garb and faces, Eating, slurping, elbowing their elders aside...

And traffic jams both in and out of shops, (But do they buy?)

Ah well, some kinder heart will say They have to GO and we can STAY! A WORD TO THEM, AND TO OUR FRIENDS AS WELL: COME MONDAYS, IF YOU HOPE TO SEE CARMEL.

Blind Trust

Dear Editor:

People sometimes ask: "Why did German people let Hitler do such terrible things?" The German people could answer that they didn't know, they trusted their leader until powerless to change things.

Why do we allow our government to commit terrible atrocities through covert operations of the CIA? We prefer to ignore them, but we can know the truth. Ex-CIA agent John Stockwell testified before Congress and wrote a book In Search of Enemies.

The highest ranking CIA agent to go public about CIA terrorist activities, John Stockwell directed CIA attempts to destabilize the Angolan government. Sickened by the gross immorality of such activities, he left the CIA and now believes that if U.S. citizens realize the terrible crimes committed in their name, they will change things.

We face the same condemnation as those under Hitler, at least in the eyes of God, if we do not face the truth about the CIA and its Contra army activities against Nicaragua. Their ruthless destruction, torture and murder of Nicaraguan civilians compare with Nazi atrocities. These are justified and praised by President Reagan as anti-communist.

Supposedly 75 percent of U.S. citizens like and blindly trust Reagan, whose mental mediocrity, power politics, brain-washing tactics, sanctimonious hypocrisy and blatant lies seem obvious to the well-informed. Reagan was elected by 32 percent of the U.S. electorate and yet holds power of life and death over the people of Nicaragua and, through control of U.S. nuclear weapons, the life and death of the entire planet.

An old-timer speaks

Dear Editor:

I am an old-time Carmelite—at least I feel that 49 years should qualify me as an "old-timer".

I love Carmel; I grew up here. I have been a little more than upset with some of the building designs that have gone into a number of new business structures that have been allowed into the business area. Perhaps I am wrong; maybe this is progress.

In relation to the walkway on Scenic Drive, I am totally opposed. Why can't we leave Scenic Drive as it is! The irregular drive, with cypress trees overlooking our beautiful bay cannot be improved by adding man-made structures such as the walkway. The estimate of $700,000 will certainly be increased by time of completion. Would it not be more practical to use some of these monies to find a method to keep our "white sands" beach clean—free from seaweed, dead birds and sealions? The litter from fires, dogs and people is unsightly and unhealthy.

Let us have our beach and Scenic Drive as natural and beautiful as our memories.

I wish to thank Mayor Eastwood for attaining and preserving another Carmel memory—the Mission Ranch.

Thank you.

Stop payhikes

Dear Editor:

NO ON PAY RAISES for members of the Cabinet or Congress or Federal Judges.

The nine-member commission chaired by James L. Ferguson must know that these gentlemen, when they run for office, are aware of the amount of salary they will receive if they are lucky enough to get into office.

Raises of 80-73-60% respectively, do not make sense. First of all, many of the above are wealthy people to start with and many have spent hundreds of thousands just to get elected or appointed, knowing what power and fringe benefits are associated with the positions.

We, the average populace are suffering with the new Tax (so-called) Reform, inflation costs, (that are supposed to be non-existent), with less monies and no way to vote increases in income for ourselves.

Why shouldn't they tighten their belts as we are forced to do?

The raise also would add to our deficit and would probably lead to a tax increase which none of us want, just for these unthinking people pushing wage increases for a favored few.

Anyway, have you called or written to your congressman, senators or the president to stop this increase or do you really care one way or the other?

Add it up

Dear Editor:

In connection with the library annex, the city administrator quotes figures of $2.25 million for the Crocker Building, which has extensive parking, compared to "total price for the proposed library annex/parking garage stands at $2.5 million". But surely, the latter estimate, unlike the Crocker, excludes the value of the land—three lots worth maybe $1 million?

Gut reactions

Dear Editor:

Several of President Reagan's close associates have said admiringly that he doesn't study situations; he just makes decisions from his gut reactions. Then why should we be surprised that the result stinks? The Iran-Contra affair is only the tip of the excrement.

A wise, intelligent analysis would conclude that with a free press, you cannot fool all the people all the time; that government by secrecy is inconsistent with democracy; that U.S. interventions abroad are immoral, illegal and ineffective and that secret CIA atrocities in Angola, Nicaragua and elsewhere are inhumane, abhorrent and produce more enemies than friends.

Also, the analysis would conclude that Nicaragua is not a communist threat but a nation deserving assistance as it struggles toward democracy and improved conditions for its long-oppressed, impoverished people and that the Contadora proposal to eliminate all foreign military intervention from Central America, accepted by all except the United States, is actually in the best interests of everyone except the greedy and corrupt.

The analysis would conclude that the military-industrial complex is a powerful, insidious force pushing this nation into unwise military expenditures and creating a warlike, aggressive society; that huge military budgets, a crippling national debt, and neglect of the environment and human needs seriously weaken our nation and that the arms race which endangers the future of the earth must and can be stopped now.

Finally it would conclude that attempted military solutions, as in the Middle East, create only terrible suffering, instability and little justice; therefore nations must find alternative ways to resolve conflict and move beyond war.

Human intelligence

Dear Editor:

By 1987 we will have a super computer that will do one billion calculations per second.

An American businessman sent a common straight pin to his Japanese counterpart. On the pin was etched the Lord's Prayer. He was really going to impress his friend, but in time the pin came back with a neat hole drilled completely through it — lengthwise!

The human brain is a marvelous machine. We can figure out almost anything except how to get along with each other.

The American people yearn for peace nationally and internationally while over 3 million people in our country are sleeping in the streets and the number of entire families living in poverty is on the increase. We read about it in our newspaper every day.

Los Angeles is described as a city under siege with gang-related murders taking a terrible toll. The churches have been barricaded and burglar-proofed against robbery and theft. The drug problem is responsible for much of it, and the users themselves must decide to end it and stop murdering themselves and others.

We're becoming more and more intelligent and less and less civilized.

Clarification on burning

Dear Editor:

Your article of Dec. 18, announcing the backyard burning season may have left the impression open burning is allowed in all rural areas on the Monterey peninsula.

To clarify, there is no open burning season whatsoever in the Pebble Beach/Del Monte Forest within the jurisdiction of the Pebble Beach Community Services District (PBCSD). This is the area behind the Pebble Beach Company's security gates and includes many neighborhoods located in or adjacent to heavily forested areas of dense vegetation.

PBCSD's prohibition of open burning was established in September 1984. This occurred after the district board had annually received numerous complaints from residents concerning the degradation of air quality and the dense smoke and odor that many times occurred when residents burned leaves and other material. At that time, residents also expressed concerns, and fire officials agreed, that with the increased numbers of residents in the Forest the risk of backyard fires escaping to forested areas posed a potentially serious fire protection problem.

Since adoption of the no-burn ordinance in 1984, the district has received many letters of support for the ordinance and very few complaints or requests for reinstatement of open burning.

No to walkway

Dear Editor:

I must of had too much Christmas spirits — I voted for the walkway. That night I had a dream. I dreamed that Scenic Road was like a straight street with no trees — just parking places with all those automobiles parked in a straight line.

When I voted I thought of some of the older people of Carmel walking in the street and being killed by a fast sports car racing along Scenic Road — not real fast — but too fast.

It is so beautiful no one in a hurry should drive that route, especially at sunset time — (I love it.)

Anyway the next day my card came back to my letter box because I put it in the wrong slot.

I vote 100% no on walkway.

So you thought library annex issue was over?

By DAVID LELAND

AMID PROTESTS from several citizens, an ad hoc committee was established at Tuesday's city council meeting to explore the feasibility of using the now-vacant Crocker Bank building to house the Harrison Memorial Library Annex.

The building, located on the northeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Mission Street, is for sale for $2.25 million.

The principal proponent of this new plan, which comes in the aftermath of the council approving its current plan, is former city councilman Tom May.

May's primary concern rests on the "open space" factor in keeping downtown in a village-like atmosphere.

"We've got to keep as much open space downtown as we can," he said. May said if the annex is built where currently planned, that area will be ruined as far as future building.

In August, the city council approved plans to construct a library annex on Sixth Avenue and Lincoln Street, across from the library. In addition, an underground parking garage will be built in conjunction with the Pine Inn.

The price for building the annex is estimated between $900,000 to $1 million with the parking garage costing about $1.5 million.

The city had been in the process of drawing up plans for that project throughout the fall and will continue during the feasibility study.

Members of the council chosen to report findings to the library board at its 4 p.m.

THE VACATED Crocker Bank building has been proposed as an alternative to the already-approved Harrison Memorial Library Annex at Lincoln and Sixth. The council deemed the suggestion serious enough to appoint an ad-hoc committee Tuesday to study the feasibility of located the annex there. (Mac McDonald photo.)

meeting Tuesday, Jan. 27, in the council chambers, are Councilmen Bob Fischer and Bob Evans. Members of city staff will also join the councilmembers.

While May appeared convinced the vacant bank would be a viable solution for the city, Jack Billwiller, library board president said he believed the Crocker Bank building was too far from the current library.

Concurring with Billwiller was Iona Logie, who is secretary for the Friends of the Library, but was not representing that group.

"Think of the devoted library staff and the weary mothers dragging their children," she said referring to the distance of the proposed building from the existing library, about three blocks.

Logie added that she felt another bank should replace the vacated Crocker Bank.

"A rose is a rose is a rose," she said. "And a bank is a bank is a bank."

EXCEPT FOR location, there are some similarities between the two buildings, as was pointed out by Doug Schmitz, city administrator.

The square footage of the proposed annex is 5,400, while the Crocker Bank's main building occupies 5,478 square feet. Both could be funded by a $1 million Harrison Memorial Library trust and city bonds. And both would take about one year to build.

The main difference between the two is parking. Schmitz said there will be about 90 spaces in the annex in conjunction with the Pine Inn underground parking garage, while there are only 19 spaces available in the bank parking lot.

May, however, said as many as 62 parking slots could be found around the Crocker building.

The principal reason Mayor Clint Eastwood put the matter on the agenda, he said, was to explore all of the options and not regret any decision at a later date. But Eastwood was not convinced that the bank would suit the city's needs.

"These are all lovely advantages," he said. "But we have to address, 'Is it satisfactory to the library?'"

But at least one resident felt the Crocker Bank's closing was a blessing in disguise.

"If you are drilling for water and oil comes up, what would you do?" said Paul Hazdovac, a 40-year Carmel resident, referring to the availability of the building.

Brightside ACT Center may close its doors for good

By SALLY FINEGAN

IT'S NOT definite, but it looks like Carmel's Brightside ACT Center may soon close its doors for good, said its administrator this week.

Hospital administrator George Staub said a definite decision will be made by Friday, Jan. 9, but that the closure of the drug and alcohol treatment center is mostly a matter of details.

"I think the closure is definite," Staub said.

Although the center itself is financially healthy, the corporation which owns it is disbanding its health care system, Staub said.

St. Benedict's Health Systems, headquartered in Ogden, Utah, purchased the center in 1984 as part of a corporate expansion, Staub said. Now St. Benedict's is divesting itself of all its properties except for its general hospital in Ogden rather than risk bankruptcy.

"They expanded too rapidly and felt they needed to retrench," he said. "They got into financial trouble."

Since only 22 nuns are left in the Order of St. Benedict's, with the youngest nun age 54, the corporation must provide for their retirement, he said.

"There are no young nuns," he said, explaining that traditionally the young nuns take care of the old. "The church has been unable to recruit any new nuns into the order." All 22 nuns are now in Ogden.

Staub said he is meeting this week with St. Benedict's vice president and comptroller, who are flying in from Ogden. "They'll be making the plan for closure at this point," Staub said.

The corporation has already closed centers in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and Missoula, Mont., and centers in Salt Lake City and Gooding, Idaho, are for sale, Staub said.

So at least until Jan. 9, the 22-bed facility will continue admitting patients, Staub said. The center presently has seven patients in residence, each paying $7,900 for a 28-day treatment program for alcohol and chemical dependencies.

The center would remain open until all admitted patients have completed their treatment programs, Staub said, making Monday, Feb. 9, the last day that Brightside's doors would remain open.

After that, Brightside's patients would have to get follow-up treatment with therapists in private practice or at the two of the area's remaining private hospitals which

GEORGE STAUB, hospital administrator at the Brightside ACT Center, said the alcohol and drug treatment facility just off Highway treat chemical dependencies — the Recovery Center at the Community Hospital of Monterey Peninsula and the Steinbeck Alcohol and Drug Treatment Center at the Community Hospital of Salinas, Staub said. He added that he had not yet contacted those hospitals to make arrangements.

JIM JENIFER, Community Hospital vice president and Recovery Center program director, said the Monterey hospital could handle any overflow of patients resulting from a closure of Brightside, which treats about 170 patients per year.

"It would not be anything out of the ordinary," Jenifer said. "As you know, we have referrals back and forth all the time." He added that his hospital would work to make the transition for Brightside patients as smooth as possible.

The Recovery Center charges anywhere from $8,500 to $10,000 for a 28-day inpatient treatment program similar to Brightside's, Jenifer said, adding that the cost depends on factors including the severity of the illness, how long principal care or detoxification lasts and what sort of diagnostic techniques or therapeutic procedures are required.

Russ Mills, alcohol program administrator in Monterey County's Department of Health, said that while a Brightside closing would not directly affect the county (as it runs mostly publicly-funded programs), the area would be losing a fine recovery program.

"We would be very sorry to see the passing of a program with such high standards and creditable success," Mills said.

Staub said he thinks a Brightside closing would leave a gap in the recovering community, adding that the Brightside ACT is the least expensive hospital of its kind in central California.

"I think all of us are very saddened by (the closing)," he said. "It's a great loss to the community."

As for the 15 Brightside staff members, "We're all on the job market," Staub said.

SINCE THERE have been no offers to take over the treatment center, a St. Benedict decision to close its Carmel facility would leave the building vacant. St. Benedict's lease extends to 1989, but co-owner of the property, Nick F. La Sorella, Pebble Beach resident and real estate entrepreneur, said he already has some potential renters.

Floyd P. Hardcastle, Carmel Convalescent Hospital administrator, has said he would like to take over the building, La Sorella said. Carmel Convalescent Hospital stands on the same four acres of land as does Brightside. La Sorella and retired judge Ralph M. Drummond have owned the land off of Highway 1 for 25 to 30 years, La Sorella said.

"Nothing's concrete," La Sorella said. "(But) ever since Hardcastle's been leasing from us he's indicated he would like to have it. So we would consider it."

"It's a pretty good piece of property. There would be a lot of interest in it."

Hardcastle said Tuesday that he would be interested in leasing the building but that he had not yet spoken to La Sorella and Drummond.

"I see all kinds of possibilities there," he said. "I've been giving it a lot of thought... It's intrigued me."

Hardcastle said that if he were to lease the building, he would consider implementing one or all of three programs:

- Child care for employees of Carmel Convalescent Hospital and Monterey Convalescent Hospital.
- Full-time residential care for six to 10 patients.
- Adult day care.

Council delays adoption of tough water ordinance

By DAVID LELAND

IN A unanimous decision Tuesday, the Carmel City Council opted to delay for 90 days its decision in adopting a permanent water ordinance for the city.

Carmel is still under the restrictions of an emergency ordinance enacted last year, which will remain effective until December.

Mayor Clint Eastwood abstained from voting because he owns property in Carmel. Eastwood has been affected by the ordinance by not being able to build due to a city-imposed moratorium on any new water hookups.

In the next three months the city will further discuss what it will do with undeveloped lots of record, according to City Atty. Don Freeman. Freeman said some sort of supply will have to be set aside for people wishing to build on vacant lots.

Agreeing with Freeman in theory, but disappointed in the delay was Roger Gentry, who owns property at Fourth Avenue and San Antonio Street.

"I have been here for a week waiting for this meeting," the San Clemente resident said. "We've done everything except get a building permit. The city is singling out people who want to be residents."

Freeman said the city also needs to adopt a policy regarding businesses and residents adding onto an existing structure.

One option he suggested was to shut off an outside faucet and add one inside, which, theoretically would not increase water usage.

mittee concerning the area of Lincoln Street and Fourth Avenue.

In addition to the proposal, which calls for a "Curve 15 mph" sign on the north side of Fourth Avenue approximately 125 feet west of Dolores Street and a 15 mph sign stenciled on the pavement opposite a new 15 mph sign on the north side of Fourth Avenue, a stop sign will be installed.

There had been discussion at the December council meeting regarding making traffic one way northbound on Lincoln Street to eastbound Fourth Avenue, but this has been delayed for further study, according to Doug Schmitz, city administrator.

The council appointed Eastwood, Councilman Jim Wright and members of city staff to look into the feasibility of buying the 54,000-foot Handley property for parking purposes.

The property is located in the R-4 district and has an asking price of about $2.5 million.

Agreed to dismiss the city's suit involving the Carmel Valley Master Plan "with prejudice" since the county recently adopted the plan.

Carmel Red Cross conducts classes in CPR techniques

IN 1986 650,000 people in the United States will die from heart attacks ... fully three-quarters of those attacks will happen at home.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation, commonly called CPR, saves approximately 250 lives every day in the United States.

With that in mind the Carmel-by-the-Sea chapter of the American Red Cross has launched a campaign to train as many people as possible in CPR techniques.

These classes will teach new standards in CPR techniques, as well as choking rescue techniques — the famed Heimlich maneuver — according to Phil Gray, chapter publicity chairman.

Those completing the CPR course will be awarded with Red Cross certificates. Class size, however, is limited. For more information, or to register, call 624-6921.

THE COUNCIL also acted on several other matters at Tuesday's meeting. These included:

- Adopting a voluntary cart trash program within the city. This had been requested by the Roscelli Corp. due to rising insurance rates, with back problems by its workers being the primary cause.

The carts, which will be provided initially for free, will cost the customer an additional $2.50 each month after 90 days.

Bill Parsons, Roscelli representative, said the company would not force the carts on its customers.

- Adopted a report from the traffic com-

Consultant says water pollution high in Carmel Valley

By DAVID LELAND

WATER POLLUTION in certain areas of Carmel Valley is well below safe levels, with a strong need for a central wastewater collection and treatment plant, according to an independent consultant contracted by the county.

The $35,000 study, financed primarily by the state, will be heard Tuesday by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. The board will decide then if it wants to proceed with construction of a sewage treatment plant which would service the impacted areas.

The matter has been set for 2 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 13, in the supervisors chambers in the county courthouse in Salinas.

The area studied extends from Los Laureles Grade to Camp Stefani and up into the Robles del Rio area. This area is commonly known as Carmel Village and Robles del Rio area.

For 5th District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, there are two principal reasons the county should move ahead with an independent treatment plant. These are to legalize lots of record currently too small to build on, and, to insure the peninsula of clean water.

Strasser Kauffman said there is a requirement that a lot be at least one acre in order to build upon, this leaves room for a septic tank to draw on but leaves some property owners out of luck as far as building.

Strasser Kauffman said many property owners only have a small chunk of land, which is all they may ever have, but with a treatment facility there is a possibility the law could be changed to allow smaller lots of record in this area only.

Strasser Kauffman added that she has no plans to begin large-scale construction in the central valley.

"We want to take care of existing property, not future ones," she said.

Another concern expressed by Strasser Kauffman entails the peninsula's water supply. All of Carmel and areas extending north to Seaside is serviced by water from the Carmel River. Any chemicals leaked by faulty septic tanks could contaminate drinking water on the peninsula.

THE RECENT pollution study, conducted during July, August and September of 1986, came as the result of the Montgomery Study done two years earlier.

The Montgomery Study essentially said there were too many units in the Carmel Valley Village and too much nitrate in the water, according to Walter Wong, county director of environmental health.

After that study the board of supervisors prohibited any new development in that area until further research was completed.

With the passage of Proposition 25, also known as the state Clean Water Act of 1984, funds became available to pursue a comprehensive review of both the village and the Robles del Rio area, Strasser Kauffman said.

This act includes provisions that allow up to 97 1/2 percent in state funding for installation of sewage facilities to unsewered areas with populations under 5,000, if the location qualifies for significant public health sewage and groundwater contamination problems.

Of the $35,000 needed for the study, $34,475 came from state funding, while the county paid the remainder.

Strasser Kauffman directed the effort, which included a team of nine county staffers. They examined 2,000 septic tanks, according to Wong, team leader.

The results showed 69 percent of these sewage facilities presenting a health hazard due to septic failures or restrictions.

The findings were then presented to EMCON, a private consultant in San Jose for further examination.

In its report, EMCON presents several findings which characterize the water conditions in the studied area. These are:

- The ground-water level in the alluvial (soil material deposited by running water) aquifer is currently rising since the California-American Water Co. halted ground-water extractions upstream of the Basin Narrows.

- High ground-water levels in the winter and spring seasons have previously resulted in a number of documented septic system failures. The currently rising ground-water levels may result in more frequent septic system failures in areas adjacent to the river as the water rises to intersect septic system leach fields during wetter portions of the year.

- Significant water contamination resulting from septic systems has clearly been identified. Nitrate concentrations downgrade from the central portion of the valley range from 31 to 61 parts per million.

These nitrate concentrations currently exceed the 25 ppm level approved by the board of supervisors for inclusion in the Carmel Valley Master Plan as a triggering mechanism.

Further, the report states, nitrate concentrations in several wells have exceeded the state Department of Health Services water quality standard for drinking water by 45 ppm.

Bacteriological data from six wells within the older alluvium (which occurs primarily in the terraces on the northern side of the valley) indicate the presence of fecal coliform, total coliform, and fecal strep bacteria concentrations.

Coliform is a bacteria which grows both inside and outside the intestine, Wong said. But when fecal coliform is present it points to raw sewage.

"Fecal coliform is an indicator," Wong said. "If they are present you have to worry about the bad ones." Wong added that the "bad ones" are bacteria which could cause diseases such as polio and typhoid fever.

- Central wastewater collection and treatment facilities are needed in the Carmel Valley Village and Rio del Robles areas in order to abate further degradation of the ground water in the project area.

will be making a policy decision. The board will either move forward or drop the matter completely, Strasser Kauffman said.

But after conducting the largest septic tank study ever on the central coast, it would appear Strasser Kauffman would not be content with dropping the matter.

She is also vehement about the location of the proposed sewage treatment plant serving only a small number of customers. Strasser Kauffman added that it is too early to begin speculating on a budget for the proposed sewage treatment plant.

"We are hoping to work with the local population and, if necessary, set up a sewage facility just for that area," she said.

Strasser Kauffman stressed there would be no new growth per se in the area and there would not be a connection with the central valley and the mouth of the valley by sewer line.

"Just because we have a sewage plant, we don't start building apartments and houses," she said.

Energy assistance available for seniors, low-income families

THE HOUSING Authority of the County of Monterey has funds available to assist low-income seniors and families with their utility bills.

The first priority for distribution of the funds is to help senior citizens receiving Social Security with their utility bills and heating fuel purchases. Second priority is to help low-income people who meet the qualifying guidelines and have received utility shut-off notices.

City clarifies its open meeting requirements

By DAVID LELAND

CARMEL CITY government has reacted to the state Legislature's recent changes in the state open meeting act by further stipulating its rules on how the public should be notified regarding city meetings.

In a letter written to the city administrator by City Atty. Don Freeman, amendments to the Brown Act were defined and city policy amplified.

The Brown Act, a 1958 piece of state legislation, guarantees the public that local agencies will conduct open meetings. It further states the public will be given adequate notice of the meeting's agenda.

Until recently, however, it was unclear how much advance notice the public was given. But in 1986, the Legislature further defined the law by stating that the meeting must be posted 72 hours prior.

The amendment further dictates that the posting must be in a location freely accessible to the public.

Currently, Carmel is posting its city council agendas at the Carmel Post Office, Harrison Memorial Library and the bulletin board in front of Carmel City Hall, according to Jeanne Brehmer, city clerk.

Brehmer added that the city picked these places as they are open weekends. This means if a special meeting were to be held Monday, the city could still post its agenda the Friday before.

Another provision in the new law calls for the agenda to be written in clear language, which an average citizen can understand.

Previously, an agenda would call for a resolution to Ordinance 86-76, for example. Now, a "general description" of the item must be contained, as well as the number of the ordinance.

But perhaps the most significant change in the workings of the Brown Act take place in the actual workings of the meeting.

Before the amendment, a person could appear in front of the council and present a problem which the council could act on if it chose. Now, under the new rules, this is no longer possible.

If an item is not on the agenda, Freeman wrote to the city, the council has three options it can choose from. These are:

- Do nothing.
- Adopt a policy in advance where any matter raised by the public is automatically referred to staff or placed on the next meeting's agenda.
- Consider that the public concern before the council arose after the agenda was posted or that an emergency situation exists.

Freeman describes an "emergency situation" as work stoppage or other activity which severely impairs public health, or a crippling disaster which severely impairs public health.

In order to override the agenda-setting provision of the amendment, the council must determine by a majority vote that an emergency situation exists. Or, by a two-thirds vote, the council may determine that the need to take action arose after the agenda was posted.

A RESIDENT has several ways to place an item on the council agenda, Brehmer said. The simplest one is to write a letter to the city clerk stating the item one wishes to address.

Another alternative is to come into city hall and state your problem and your desire to appear before the city council. City hall is located on Monte Verde Street between Ocean Street and Seventh Avenue.

Lastly, a person may appear before the council during a meeting and request an item to be placed on the next month's calendar.

It is important, however, that residents take into consideration the time it takes the city staff to prepare its reports for a city council meeting, Brehmer said.

Each item on the agenda entails research and preparation by the correct official.

With this in mind, Brehmer sets a cutoff date of the Wednesday before the Wednesday that the packet is sent to the printers by the city.

For example, if a city council meeting were scheduled for Jan. 6, Brehmer would send the packet to the printer on Dec. 31 so the packet could be in the hands of the councilmembers and other pertinent staff by Friday, Jan. 2. This gives councilmembers time to become familiar with the agenda.

County seeks appointees to advisory committee

Planners will consider two building applications

By NANCY HILLS

TWO BUILDING applications held over from 1986 will highlight the Carmel Planning Commission's first meeting of the new year when it convenes next week.

The commission will meet at 3 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 14 in the Carmel City Council Chambers, located in city hall on Monte Verde Street.

Ted Leidig's request to build six apartments above the Dansk building, as well as Mary Klienbardt's application to demolish the Surf Tides Inn are scheduled to top the agenda.

Leidig's application, when first reviewed last year, generated concern among the commissioners regarding the ambience of Ocean Avenue if second stories were allowed to proliferate.

The application is for a second-story addition of six apartments to be built over the single-story building which houses Dansk, Hanson Gallery and Pernille Restaurant, located on San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue.

Leidig is resubmitting plans, as requested by the commissioners, to ameliorate the effect of the second story and lot coverage. The building's lot coverage presently is more than allowed by code.

When the application was first reviewed Dec. 3, some commissioners voiced concern about turning Ocean Avenue into a "canyon" if the second-story trend were allowed to continue.

The commission will also continue its review of Klienbardt's application to build a 28-unit residential care facility at Mission Street and Fifth Avenue.

The commission also requested Klienbardt to resubmit plans which would change the height of the proposed four-level building.

A major question for the commissioners is one of density. At 28 units, the proposed construction would be the highest-density building allowed in the city.

But there have also been doubts whether a residential care facility would be successful in Carmel.

Myles Williams, owner of Carmel Inn for Seniors, has written and addressed the commission about concerns of what the building would be transformed into if the operation failed.

Brian Roseth, staff planner, had suggested to the commission that it require the building to be constructed in such a manner that it could be turned into an apartment house.

year's business is an application from the Cobblestone Inn for a license for the incidental sale of beer and wine.

According to co-owner Roger Post, the Cobblestone Inn, which operates on a "bed and breakfast" format, has occasional requests by customers who wish to buy a bottle of wine.

Currently this is against the city's municipal code, but it appears this practice is becoming fairly common and is even sanctioned by the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

The ABC has said, according to Post, that it would sell the Cobblestone Inn a license for on-sale use if the city revises its code.

Post said the ABC has already granted on-sale licenses at two other inns owned by him — the Green Gables Inn and the Gosby House, both in Pacific Grove.

BLM HIRING FIREFIGHTERS

The Bakersfield District of the Bureau of Land Management is accepting applications through Jan. 15 for seasonal firefighting positions. Approximately 65 firefighters will be hired to work during the 1987 fire season, from about May to September.

The Bakersfield District encompasses 1.7 million acres of BLM-administered public lands throughout 32 counties in central California. The district fire stations are located at Topaz Lake, Bridgeport, Conway Summit and Benton in Mono County; Bishop and Independence in Inyo County; Kennedy Meadows and Chimney Peak in Tulare County, and South Lake in Kern County.

Seasonal firefighters may be assigned to work on dispatch, engines, helitack, prevention patrols or the Kern Valley Hotshot Crew. Most seasonal employees will be paid from $5.18 to $7.10 per hour, with some supervisory positions paid $7.92 per hour. Assignments and pay will depend on the individual's past training and experience.

All persons wishing to be considered for a seasonal firefighting position must submit an Application for Seasonal Employment (only one per person), available by writing to or visiting the BLM office at 800 Truxtun Ave., Room 301, Bakersfield, CA 93301, or by calling (805) 861-4191.

Water board action may impact all allocations

By NANCY HILLS

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District is starting off the new year with a agenda item that could eventually affect water allocation for the entire peninsula.

At its first meeting in 1987, the water board will consider mandating an environmental impact report on the effects of increasing the total amount of water the district allows for present and future consumption.

The water board will meet 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 12 in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

The EIR findings could result in an increase or decrease of the water allocations to each city, including Carmel, and to the portion of Monterey County within the district.

Carmel is currently under a self-imposed ban on new construction because it exceeded its allocation during the last "water year," July 1 to June 31, and is negotiating its water allocation with the district via a lawsuit filed in November.

Also scheduled is consideration of changing board member elections to 1988, an action which could extend by a year the terms of three current board members.

Other agenda items include changing the district's annual allocations to correct errors revealed by California-American Water Co.'s audit of water meters and consideration of an ordinance to charge additional fees to non-cooperating permit applicants.

The EIR, according to water district chairman Dick Heuer, would be the first step in accommodating Carmel's request to expand the available water supply. It should determine environmental effects, including growth impacts, and the water-supply shortage during a two-year drought if the total water allocated is increased from 18,600 acre feet.

Carmel's lawsuit claims that the district was in violation of the California Environmental Quality Act by not mandating an EIR on the allocation system when it was done in 1981 and that the allocation system involves the district in illegal land-use planning.

The report could indicate that the water supply should be reduced rather than increased, Heuer has said in previous meetings, which could affect the entire peninsula.

"We have a great deal more information about the water system than when the allocation was first done," he said.

Barring any complications, the EIR should be completed by June 1987, Buel said. Its development will use the district's computer program that simulates the peninsula's natural water system and work in progress for the EIR on the proposed San Clemente Dam.

Also barring any complications, the program should be calibrated by the end of January.

Included in the report will be the effect of increased pumping in the Seaside coastal region. Carmel has stated that the Seaside aquifer could be pumped to a greater extent than presently is permitted.

CURRENTLY, THE district allows a maximum water supply, both from pumping and the two Carmel River dams, of 20,000 acre feet. Of that, 18,600 acre feet is divided between the six cities and portion of Monterey County in the district for their current and future use. The remaining 1,400 acre feet is reserved for emergency and non-metered use. (One acre foot equals 325,851 gallons.)

The district in 1981 chose a maximum allocation of 20,000 acre feet based on the Public Utilities Commission's 1976 decision that the peninsula had a total of 22,000 acre feet to use during an average rainfall year.

In a drought year or years, the total is less; in heavier rain years, more. In 1981, peninsula water consumption was approximately 14,500 acre feet. In 1986, it was approximately 17,500 acre feet.

The district determined that allowing water demand to grow to 20,000 acre feet was the limit, and allocated 2,000 acre feet for a "drought reserve."

The board felt that permitting the annual demand to grow beyond 20,000 acre feet would leave the peninsula too vulnerable during another two-year drought like the one in 1976-77, at least until a major water supply project was completed. Also, there was concern about the environmental effects of greater water consumption.

The 18,600 acre feet of metered use for the cities and county was divided between those political jurisdictions. The division was based on 1979 use and a growth formula agreed upon by district committees consisting of planning department members and elected officials.

The allocation granted each jurisdiction annually the percentage of the total water supply it was projected they would be using in the year 2000. Each jurisdiction could plan its growth around the amount of water available to them.

In 1986, Carmel reached 100 percent of its allocation, with no new water supply on line, and instituted a ban on any new construction or business activity that would increase the city's annual water use. Carmel, at this time, is the only jurisdiction to actually consume more than it has been allocated.

The district is mandated by its own laws to put a moratorium on any new water meter connections in a jurisdiction that reaches 100 percent of its allocation.

However, when Carmel's water use was reviewed in September, Cal-Am's figures showed the city's water consumption at 99.99 percent. Though later figures showed the September numbers to be in error, and Carmel to have actually used 100.4 percent, the district has not acted to review water consumption again and has not instituted a moratorium on Carmel.

In another agenda item, the board will consider changing the review period from annually to every three months, using a 12-month "rolling year."

In response to concerns about future moratoriums by the water district, the city of Carmel has filed a lawsuit against the district and the allocation system.

eliminate errors found during an audit by Cal-Am of water meter locations within the district's seven jurisdictions.

The audit revealed that 128 meter accounts had been miscoded and their water use attributed to the wrong city or the county.

Some accounts, the audit revealed, had been attributed to the wrong jurisdiction when the allocations were done.

The largest amount of water use, along with the accompanying adjustment to the allocation, is between the city of Monterey and Monterey County. Approximately 415 acre feet of water use actually in the city of Monterey was attributed to the county. That amount should have been a part of Monterey's 1979 base year use when the allocation was done.

If the board votes for the adjustment, Monterey will receive the 415 acre feet for its allocation, and the water use from the errant meters will be subtracted annually.

The board will have a first reading of an ordinance to charge administrative fees to applicants who do not get a water meter permit from the district when one is required.

The fee is to cover the cost to the district of obtaining the water permit fees of those applicants. Currently, five of the cities and the Monterey County planning department require proof of payment of the district's water permit fees. Pacific Grove remains the only jurisdiction that does not comply.

However, the ordinance is for all applicants, not just those from Pacific Grove.

Determine whether to change its board member elections from odd years to even years.

The item is in response to a change in election laws that allows special districts to change their elections to coincide with major state and national elections.

If the election is changed, the terms of three board members — Dick Heuer, Pat Bernardi and John Williams — will be extended another year until 1988. They currently are up for re-election in November 1987.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors will review the voting facilities on Tuesday, Jan. 6, to determine if it is feasible for special districts to make the switch to even years.

IN OTHER agenda items, the water board will:

- Decide on amending the allocations to

Middle school arts teacher comes full circle

By DAVID LELAND

HE HAS come full circle. Carmel Middle School teacher Scott Rainer, 28, believes that in order to keep something, you have to give it away.

With this in mind, Rainer returned to Middle School five years ago as an instructor. A few years before he had toiled in the same classrooms as a student.

"The reward for inspiring somebody is one of the greatest feelings there is," said Rainer, who spent 1969 to 1972 attending classes at Middle School. "I know how great it is 'cause my teachers inspired me."

For Rainer, it appears teaching borders on a spiritual experience, which he approaches with vehemence and enthusiasm. Rainer teaches industrial arts.

"For a while people were beginning to doubt the validity of this class," said Rainer, who has a master's degree in industrial arts. "But industry affects all of our lives. I'm teaching the ABC's of industry."

Indeed, Rainer, who also teaches art and mechanical drawing, sees his classes as a time to expose his students to ideas which may affect their entire lives.

"I never took mechanical drawing until I was in college," he said, referring to the fact that the class was not offered in CUSD when he was a student. "If I had, it might have changed my whole life."

Born in Carmel Convalescent Hospital, now the site of Brightside ACT drug and alcohol rehabilitation center, Rainer also attended Carmel River School and Carmel High School while growing up in Carmel.

He sees the kids' problems today in his class as about the same as those many of his peers experienced while they were attending school.

"A lot of students hate it (school)," he said. "But little do they know what a real job is like."

With this in mind, he spends extra time with students who are having a hard time. Many students, Rainer said, bring with them to school the problems of a broken home.

"It's difficult to teach a kid that's having a real problem," he said. "They take most of the time."

Rainer said that adolescence is a harder experience for some youngsters than others, a fact which he tries to accept.

"You spend most of your time with kids that don't learn," he said. "The ones that do learn do it on their own."

It appears, however, that Rainer has teaching in his genes.

His father, Buzz, teaches Shakespeare and British literature at Carmel High School. His mother, Barbara, teaches ceramics at Peninsula Potters in Pacific Grove. Older brother Ted teaches computers part time and younger sister Jeanie teaches at Oakland School of Arts and Crafts.

The family, Rainer said, has a thirst for knowledge which is insatiable.

Currently Rainer is finishing work on his science credential at Monterey Peninsula College. Having recently finished an astrology class, Rainer hopes to begin teaching science classes next year at Middle School.

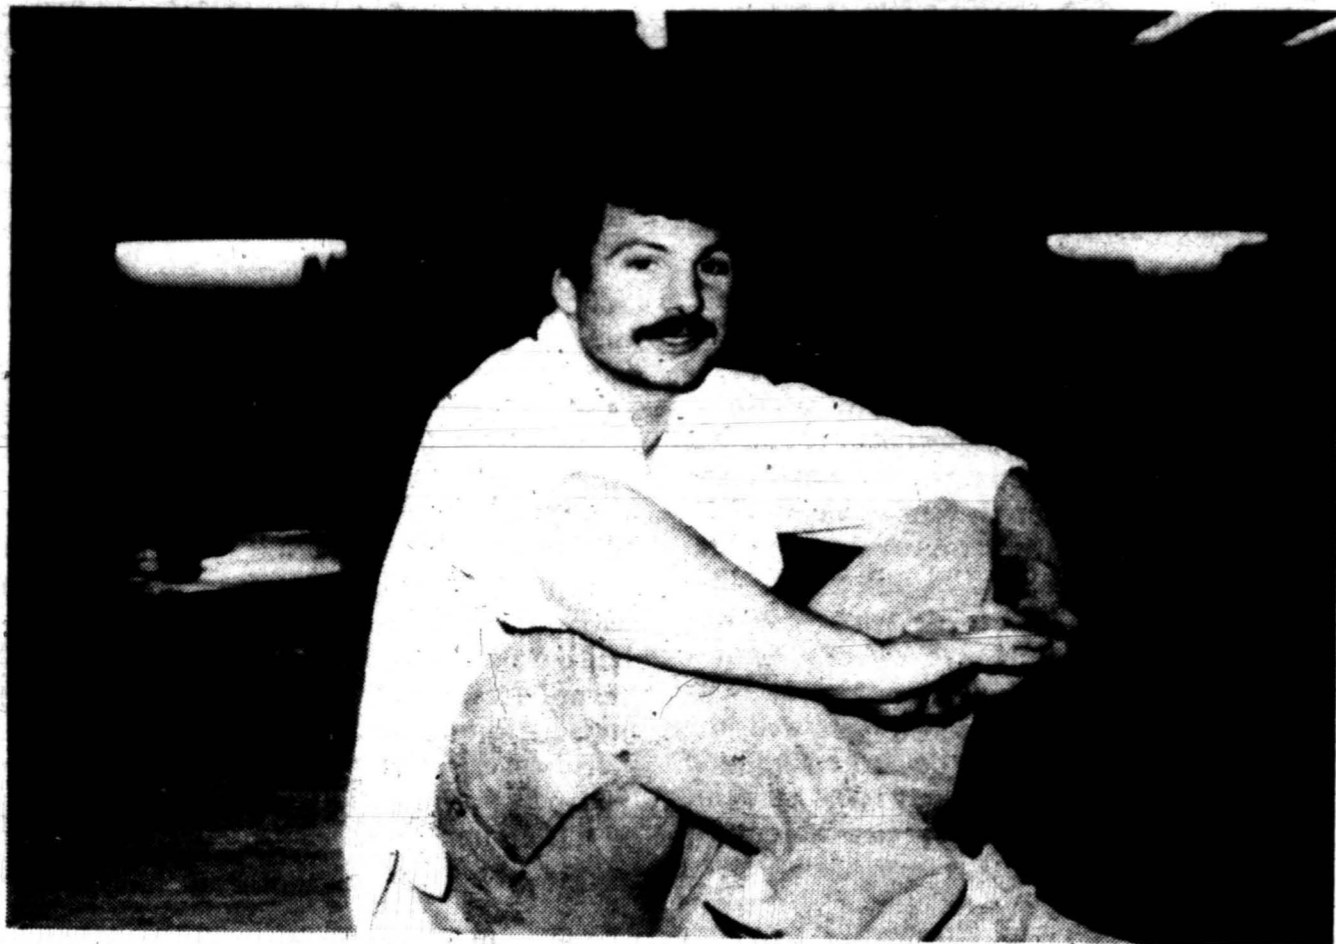

But industrial arts remains Rainer's first love. This began in his youth when a neighbor asked him to do some work on his house. From there, Rainer built a fort in his garage. This year Rainer built a house for himself.

"I bought the wood, did the plumbing, sheet rock, everything," he said. Rainer also did the landscaping.

When Rainer speaks of teaching or learning the same feeling comes across — he enjoys life. In fact, he has had to moderate his enthusiasm.

"I used to say I was going to play," said Rainer, referring to when he first began teaching. "But people took it the wrong way."

Maybe some people just don't know how to have fun.

SCOTT RAINER has returned to Carmel Middle School, where he teaches industrial arts. Rainer, who attended Middle School, believes school should be an enjoyable experience for everyone, as it is for him. (David Leland photo.)

Amended school schedule slated for next week

DUE TO teacher development workshops, Carmel schools will be closed or on limited schedules Monday and Tuesday next week.

Both Carmel River School and Carmel Middle School will be closed Monday, Jan. 12. Meanwhile, Carmel High School will operate on a minimum day Tuesday, Jan. 13.

FOR RAINER, school has always been an enjoyable experience. Part of that, he said, was due to his teachers, many of whom are now his co-workers at Middle School.

"I really liked school," he said. "I want to give that joy back."

Rainer said his former teachers have been supportive in offering their ideas when he approaches them. In many ways it is like he is still attending.

"Middle School hasn't changed all that much," he said. The only difference, he said, is there is a wider diversity of subjects. He cited the school's honor classes, computer instruction and crafts classes.

Burn permit rules change with fire season closure

THE CALIFORNIA Department of Forestry reminds residents that the status of burning permit rules change when the fire season closes and a review of the rules now in effect would be appropriate. People wishing to burn inside cities should consult their city fire department.

The Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District (APCD) rules and regulations prohibit all burning except for the following:

- Incinerators at one- or two-family dwellings where no garbage service exists. May be used all year.
- Yard prunings can be burned between Jan. 1 and May 31 in Monterey County at one- or two-family dwellings.
- Land clearing operations can burn vegetation if no other means of disposal exist and prior approval and a permit have been obtained from the APCD office.
- Agricultural burning to dispose of natural agricultural waste.
- Burning to reduce a fire hazard if no other means of disposal exist and the local fire agency has designated the fire hazard.
- Campfires are permitted with the landowners' written permission.
- Large project burns for forest and rangeland management are allowed with the proper permits.

• Inside the Smoke Sensitive Area on the Monterey Peninsula no more than 25 permittees per burn day per fire jurisdiction may burn.

Fire agencies have the following requirements regarding burning inside their jurisdictions:

• Not requiring burn permits for burning for incinerators and yard prunings during the non-fire season will be:

a. The California Department of Forestry, CDF, in all areas except the Smoke Sensitive Area on the Monterey Peninsula. Phone: 385-5412.

b. Salinas Rural Fire Protection District. Phone: 455-1829. Permits will be required again for all burning beginning May 1, 1987.

• Requiring permits all year and allowing no more than 25 permittees per burn day will be:

a. Rio Road Fire Station and Carmel Hill Forest Fire Station, CSA 43 manned by the CDF. Phone: 649-2920.

b. Carmel Highlands Fire Protection District. Phone: 624-2374.

c. Carmel Valley Fire Protection District. Phone: 659-2021.

d. Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Protection District. Phone: 624-5907.

e. CDF within the Smoke Sensitive Area. Phone: 649-2920.

• Not allowing any burning at all will be: Pebble Beach Community Services District manned by CDF. Phone: 375-4204.

MANY PROBLEMS "CUSSED" AND DISCUSSED BY TRUSTEES

The city board of trustees held an interesting meeting on Tuesday evening. The main topic under discussion was the effect of the late storm on the streets and private property. Several property owners were present and requested advice and assistance from the board in methods for diverting storm water from their property and in repairing damages to streets in their vicinity.

An informal discussion followed. The difficulties of the drainage problem on ground with so great a slope as that of Carmel and the sandy character of the soil, together with the impossibility of any adequate drainage system, were all mentioned.

COUNCIL MOVES TO ACCEPT FOREST THEATER AS GIFT

The Forest Theater, for more than a quarter of a century one of Carmel's most characteristic institutions, has been offered to the city of Carmel as a gift, free and clear of all encumbrances, and with no strings attached. The only stipulation of the Forest Theater board of directors, in making its offer by letter to the city council Wednesday evening, was that the 14 wooded lots constituting the theater be used for park purposes only, and that the production of outdoor theatricals be considered a legitimate park use.

Members of the council were unanimous in the opinion that the gift should be accepted. A motion was passed stating the intention of the council to do so. Final action will be taken at the council meeting to be held Wednesday evening, Jan. 20.

NO FLAGPOLE AT CARMEL HIGH NOW! DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION BANS NEW 50-FOOTER... OLD SHORTY GONE

It's beginning to look as if Carmel High School won't have a new flagpole after all.

The latest chapter in a long story of misadventure is the news that the 50-foot flagpole donated to the school and brought there by Carmel firemen in mid-December does not meet State Department of Education requirements for flagpoles and is therefore unusable.

It's just not sturdy enough, according to school authorities. Flagpoles, to meet safety and insurance requirements, should be made of boiler plate, but the gift flagpole was fashioned from iron pipe.

The result of this latest blow to the flagpole project is that Carmel High has no new pole standing, nor even its old flagpole, which was taken down to make way for the new. School flags are now flying from the halyard at the football field.

DOG RESTRICTIONS VOTED

Dogs will no longer be able to travel at will in city parks. At its first January meeting, the city council instituted an emergency ordinance requiring that owners have their pets under control at all times in the city's parks as well as at the beach.

At present, dogs are allowed loose in the residential district, except along Carmel Beach where they must be under owner command. The new ordinance extends to the parks the same type of restriction now in effect on the beach.

Aimed primarily at the Flanders-Doolittle park, across from the mission, the ordinance was deemed necessary after a number of complaints were received by police about animals roving the park. One dog bite was reported, one person was treed by dogs, and another forced to climb on top of his vehicle.

STORM CAUSES LITTLE DAMAGE IN CARMEL

The major storm that ripped through Northern California on Monday, bringing heavy rains and gusty winds, caused little damage in Carmel.

The worst storm damage occurred at about 11 a.m. at the Surf Tides Lodge, located at Fifth and Mission Streets. According to lodge manager George Salinger, a pine tree plunged through the roof of the two-story structure and into Room 17. Nobody was in the room at the time.

Carmel City Foresters Greg D'Ambrosio said it took five crew members three and one-half hours to clean the tree away.

D'Ambrosio reported that the storm was the "worst" in his 10 years with the city. He said the pine tree and two acacia trees fell during the storm.

"We just cut through the fanfare and red tape and got the job done," he said. Government agencies involved in developing the trail included Parks and Recreation, Conservation Corps, State Coastal Conservancy, Coastal Commission and Caltrans.

DOLLARS & SENSE

Shark attack

SHARKS made the news again this past year. One-third of all shark attacks along the California-Oregon coast have occurred in Monterey Bay. Or at least that's what one of the media types intoned following the most recent unfortunate incident at Monastery Beach. Not to make too light of the subject, we've never understood why anyone except a shark would venture into the frigid Pacific hereabouts. We love our fabled peninsula, but there's no way we're going to dip our pampered skins in that icy surf.

We find it ironic, however, that shark attacks here off the coast of Steinbeck country should be in the news these days along with the transcontinental shark attack recently launched by our keepers of the republic back in the District of Columbia. Their nibble at our tender parts is called Tax Reform. This time around they've literally swiped away most of our shelter. This time the tax shark has real teeth.

Most folks these days are beginning to think there's no repellent to ward off the tax predator under the new law. And most folks would be wrong if they think that that old standby, the municipal bond, has lost any of its luster. Not so. We'd like to expand on the many virtues still remaining in the tax-free interest of munis.

On a strictly comparative basis, municipal bonds are more attractive now than they were under the old law, if only because this particular form of tax relief has been hit with much less force than other tax-advantaged investments.

We've stressed recently that income-producing stocks (Pacific Telesis, Southern Cal Edison, etc.) have become more valuable under a tax law that treats income equally with capital gains. The same logic boosts the value of income-producing municipal bonds.

In short, the new law bearing down on us, dorsal fin erect and menacing, shies away from the income-oriented investor.

Over the next several issues we're going to explore some of the basic relationships between your income and municipal bonds.

We promise it won't be just another fish story.

FIRE LINES

By Mitch Kastros

Making your home fire safe for winter

WINTER IS here, so now is a good time to do a few simple things to make your home fire-safe.

It's a good idea to have your fireplace and chimney checked once a year, and cleaned if needed. People who use their fireplaces regularly should have their chimneys checked more often, and cleaned annually.

The soot buildup from many fires tends to accumulate, and will act like a giant piece of charcoal in your chimney. A hot fire in the fireplace can ignite this buildup and create a very hot fire inside the chimney, which is both dangerous and damaging to the structure. Keeping this chimney cleaned greatly reduces the chances of this happening.

The best way to get your chimney cleaned is to have it done by a licensed chimney care company. You can find them in the Yellow Pages under "Chimney Cleaning and Repairing." Many offer free estimates, free inspections and senior citizen discounts.

A helpful hint when burning in your fireplace is not to load it with more wood than it can handle. This creates a fire that may be too hot, which will make a chimney fire more likely if the chimney is dirty. Also, open a window slightly to allow some air to circulate around the room. This will keep the oxygen in the room from being cut off by the fire, which is especially important in small rooms with a limited supply of air.

Remember, if you are ever in a situation where you have a fire inside your chimney, call the fire department. We have special equipment for fighting chimney fires, so don't try to put it out yourself.

CHECK YOUR FURNACE

A quick and simple way to make sure your furnace is fire-safe is to check the filter. Since this is the time of year you use your heater the most, it is a good idea to replace a dirty filter. Not only is it a safe thing to do, but your furnace will run more efficiently with a clean filter.

You might want to vacuum or dust off the cobwebs and dirt that may have accumulated around the furnace. This is a very quick and easy way to make your furnace fire safe.

Care of floor furnaces should involve vacuuming lint and dirt from on and around the heater, and checking to make sure that nothing has fallen into the heater that shouldn't be in there. Also, make sure rugs are not touching or are too close to the heater, and please, don't drape wet clothing over a floor furnace for drying. This is a very dangerous practice since floor furnaces get much hotter than other types of heaters.

If you suspect your furnace or any other gas appliances has a gas leak, or would like to have it checked anyway, PG&E provides this service free of charge. Call them for an appointment.

KEROSENE HEATERS

The California Health and Safety Code (Section 19881) says, "No person shall, on or after January 1, 1972, sell or offer for sale, any new or used unvented heater, which is designed to be used any dwelling house or unit, with the exception of an electric heater, or of decorative gas logs for use in a vented fireplace."

Please restrict the use of these kerosene heaters to what the code refers to — specifically, garages and working areas that are properly ventilated. These heaters use a great deal of oxygen, so they need plenty of fresh air. They get very hot, so make sure that they are away from flammable liquids, combustibles and toxic substances.

If you need to use a portable electric heater, make sure it is the kind that will shut itself off in case it is tipped over. Also, remember to place it in a safe spot in the room, and that there is adequate ventilation.

Since the wintertime involves the use of such items as fireplaces, wood burning stoves, furnaces and kerosene and electric heaters, the risk of a fire in your home will increase. Now is a good time to have a fire extinguisher handy around the house.

If you already have one, see that it is up to date on its servicing (they should be checked annually regardless of the indication of the pressure gauge), and that you know how to use it. If you are shopping for an extinguisher, be sure to buy one that is all metal. Call the fire department if you have any questions about fire extinguishers and their use. We will be happy to assist you.

MOOSE LODGE 876 JOINS EFFORT AGAINST DRUG ABUSE

Monterey Moose Lodge 876, located at 555 Canyon Del Rey, Del Rey Oaks, Ca. 93940, has joined the international effort against drug abuse. The Moose Lodge project is part of a unique campaign initiated by the International Headquarters of the Loyal Order of Moose, a fraternity composed of more than 1,750,000 members located in the U.S. and Canada.

In the effort to combat the use of drugs by youngsters, the Moose project will seek recommendations from high school students as to how best our nations should deal with the problem. The fraternal organization will sponsor 45 state and provincial "Student Congresses" and an international session to be held in Mooseheart, Ill.

Each Moose Lodge will sponsor two high school students within the school district where the lodge is located. The selected students from each school district will convene at a "Student Congress" in a capitol or centralized city sponsored by the Moose. The students will conduct their own meeting to discuss the drug abuse problem and draft a report with recommendations.

One or two students at each congress will then be chosen by the students in attendance to participate in the international "Student Congress" at Mooseheart, Ill., a child care community owned and operated by the Loyal Order of Moose.

The international "Student Congress" will provide the opportunity to develop an international consensus on how to deal with drug abuse. Upon discussion and debate, the students will draft a final list of recommendations. Approximately four students from this session will then be selected to attend and submit the final draft of recommendations in a report to a National Symposium on Voluntarism in Washington D.C. The symposium is organized by the Loyal Order of Moose and will be attended by 100 community, business, fraternal, service and governmental organizations.

A copy of the student's report will be submitted to the White House.

CARING IS SHARING

County Bank and Trust's annual holiday coloring contest entitled "Caring is Sharing" came to a conclusion on Tuesday, Dec. 23. Prizes were awarded by the bank's chief banking officer, George Gallucci at the downtown Carmel branch of CB&T.

"The program was a tremendous success, considering we were expecting about 500 total entries from both the Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, but we ended up with over 2,300," Gallucci said.

The bank donates $1 for each entry to a local senior citizens organization. At the awards presentation was Patricia Sandstrum, project director for Alliance on Aging representing Monterey County and Beverly Calvo, senior division director at Golden Age Nutrition for Santa Cruz County.

There were 37 public and private schools that participated. Each school will receive a Certificate of Participation suitable for display in their trophy cases.

All first prize winners received a $100 Savings Bond. Second prize was $25 cash and third was $10 cash. The following is a list of winners:

• Ages 3-6: 1st: Michaela Swallow, Monte Vista School; 2nd: Emily Paddock, All Saints School; 3rd: Genevieve Garcia, San Carlos School.

Jack Guio, a Class A member of the Northern California Professional Golfers Association, was named the head professional at Poppy Hills Golf Course on Tuesday, Dec. 20. The announcement was made by San Jose's Robert A. Moore, President of Poppy Hills Inc.

Poppy Hills, the newest course in the golf haven of the Monterey Peninsula, opened June 1. It is the only facility in the United States owned and operated by amateur golf association — the 104,000-member Northern California Golf Association.

"We are pleased to announce the selection of Jack Guio," Moore said. "We feel he will fit into our program extremely well. Jack was chosen after an extensive review of many qualified candidates. He will participate in the golf shop and handle teaching responsibilities. He also is a person who will respond well to the groups who come to our golf course. We expect him to provide first class, professional guidance."

Guio, 45, has been the head professional at Oak Ridge Golf Course for nearly six years. That facility is expected to close in March. He will be at Poppy Hills beginning March 1.

"This is very exciting," Guio said, when told of his selection. "I look forward to being a part of the Poppy Hills team. I want to be there to help people enjoy what is a fantastic golf course."

Guio says he believes his strengths are teaching and public relations. "It will be exciting to put these things into action at Poppy Hills...the peninsula is a super area. It will be fun to be a part of that."

Guio has been a member of the PGA since becoming an apprentice in 1979. He earned his Class A status in 1983.

He started his golf instruction career at Pruneridge Golf Course in Santa Clara in 1975 and moved to the Lock de Bretteville's Golf Shop in Campbell in 1979. He moved to Oak Ridge in February of 1981.

Golf Shop sales at Oak Ridge tripled in his first two years there. He also boasts 10 years of teaching experience, including individual and group lessons. He has been active in junior golf clinics and also has conducted golf tours to the Hawaiian Islands.

LOCAL STUDENTS TO JOIN FIGHT AGAINST DRUG ABUSE

Six local high school students have been chosen to participate in a nationwide forum aimed at stopping drug abuse.

Local students, including two students, Shwante Nephew and Jody Aliotti of Monterey High School, Clarissa Berkman and Juliet Peck of Carmel High School, and Nellie Goltz and Alicia Vanzant of Seaside High School have been selected to participate in the Loyal Order of Moose-sponsored California Student Congress on Drug Abuse. Monterey Moose Lodge 876 initiated the student selection. The Student Congress will be held Jan. 3 in Sacramento.

The California Student Congress on Drug Abuse is among many being sponsored by the fraternity. The congresses are being held in 47 locations representing 49 U.S. states and four Canadian provinces. High school students in nearly 2,300 communities across North America have been asked to participate. They will formulate ideas to combat drug abuse.

Monterey - A Movie Mecca

The Monterey Peninsula is known throughout the world as the home of famous celebrities and the scene of world-class events. Two of these events are coming soon — the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am (Jan. 26-Feb. 1) followed closely by the launching of the inaugural Monterey Film Festival.

Talk of a film festival here goes back for years — but it was only talk. However, talk in 1985 will become a reality Feb. 5-8. The purpose of the festival is the promotion of motion pictures, video and cultural awareness in Monterey County.

The non-profit MFF is in the capable hands of David Bean (previously regional promotion director for Columbia Pictures and president of Pacific Arts Video). Upon his appointment, Mr. Bean said, "Millions of people worldwide have begun to firmly associate the Monterey Peninsula with the magic of movies, resulting from the extraordinary amount of international media attention being given to film industry luminaries residing here. With the whole world watching, the timing could not be better than now to launch the Monterey Film Festival."

We certainly have stars galore residing on the Monterey Peninsula, and most are taking vital interest in the MFF.

Gus Arriola (cartoonist) of Carmel says, "Many of us Californians are movie-oriented. As teenagers we haunted Los Angeles star-studded premieres at the Carthay Circle, Grauman's Chinese and Pantages theaters. Later I put in four pre-Gordo years on MGM's Lot Two (cartoon department), rubbing elbows with Garbo, the Marx Brothers, Tracy, Mickey Rooney, and countless others during the last years of the Golden Era." He continues, "If there was ever an ideal area to stage a film festival, it is the Monterey Peninsula with its natural attractions and its discerning residents."

"Filmmaking is one of our most influential arts. We should all do our utmost to help make the MFF an annual world-class affair."

The poster Mr. Arriola created for the benefit of the festival is still available for sale. His characters are featured in tuxedos awaiting the exciting prospects of the premiere MFF... Gato the cat, Senor Dog, Owl and Gordo, of course. Here's your chance to start a collection that may never end.

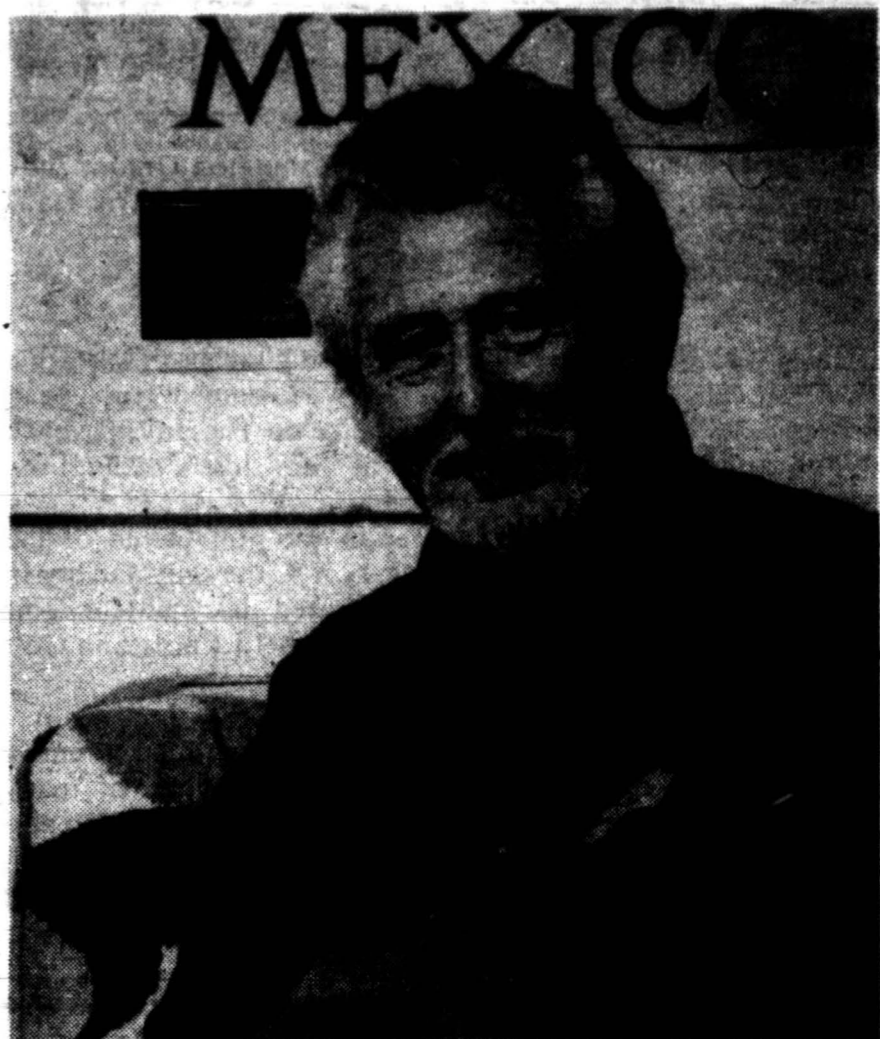

MFF board president Morgan Stock (actor-director) said, "Films are absolutely necessary for the enrichment and nourishment of man's soul."

Myles Williams, board member and former lead singer and soloist for the New Christy Minstrels in the mid-sixties, says, "I know the MFF will be incredibly successful because half the people I have mentioned this to think it has been going on for years. It is a natural for our area and in the first year could possibly surpass any festival, tournament or gala held on the peninsula — with the exception of the coming visit of the Pope, of course."

Myles, who lives in Carmel, toured internationally with Bob Hope, Tom Jones, Danny Thomas, Cher, José Feliciano, Kenny Rogers, etc. He performed in the White House for President and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, in the London Palladium for the Queen of England, and has several gold records, including one for This Land Is Your Land.

Director, actor and Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood, has thrown his support behind the MFF. Mr. Eastwood will receive special honors at the Director's Ball. You all remember that he filmed his Play Misty For Me right here.

Michael Nesmith, former guitarist-vocalist with The Monkees, went on to earn two gold records as soloist-songwriter. Mr. Nesmith formed Pacific Arts Video Records (based in Carmel) in 1976 and in 1983 he ventured into major motion picture production with his action features Timerider and Repo Man. He lives in Los Angeles and Carmel and is a pilot, off-road racer, property investor and art collector and is on the MFF board.

Peter Sealey, president of Domestic Marketing and Distribution Group for Columbia Pictures covering the United States and Canada, is one of the active MFF board members.

Charles Chrietberg, of Houston, Texas and Carmel, and owner of La Reina Chardonnay, has officially signed on as the festival's major sponsor. He said, "We're delighted to take on this major role to assure total success for the festival's first year. La Reina is proud to represent the award-winning wine community of Monterey."

This Texas-born entrepreneur, recently named chairman of the Monterey County Bank board, has invested in the recently-released film The Native Son.

Doris Day and her son, Terry Melcher, are planning to attend all the affairs of the festival, with special interest in the Monterey Pop night.

Major studio premieres will spark the four-day festival, as well as workshops, tributes and special events. Something for everyone — classics, documentaries, foreign films, short films, animated films, family-oriented films and films produced and/or directed by women.

If you haven't joined forces with the festival you have little time left. There are various categories available: Friend $35, Supporter $100, Sponsor $250, Patron $500, Benefactor $1,000, silver circle $1,000 and corporate sponsorships. You may call 649-8887 for more information.

Tickets range from $5 for regular screenings to $50 for the most elaborate evening events with an all-inclusive evening event ticket price of $150. Available at Bass ticket outlets all over California and at Centerstage Ticketing, Monterey.

Here are some of the glittering star-studded events that will make you want to reach for that checkbook:

DIRECTOR, ACTOR and Carmel Mayor, Clint Eastwood, has said he thinks the festival is a great idea and is one of its honorary board members. (Chuck Scardina photo.)

- Feb. 5: World premiere of a major international film at Cinema 70 with a Grand Premiere Celebration attended by the stars of the film.

- Feb. 6: A 20th Anniversary Tribute screening of Monterey Pop Festival with director D.A. Pennebaker, producer John Phillips, and Scott McKenzie, who wrote its theme song, If You're Going to San Francisco Be Sure To Wear Flowers In Your Hair. Following will be a Monterey Pop Reunion Party at the Monterey Fairgrounds — original site of the pop festival.

- Feb. 7: A screening of Charly followed by a black-tie Monterey Vineyard Directors Ball to pay tribute to Cliff Robertson, who won an Academy Award for his title role.

Other special guests will be Jane Russell and Mayor Eastwood.

Closing events Feb. 8 will include a major foreign film premiere at the Golden Bough theater in Carmel, and the Grand Finale Party with stars of the film attending and sponsored by La Reina.

Unique to this festival is an International Sports Film competition with tributes to Steve Sabol of National Football League Films and to PGA.

MFF board and committee heads are Morgan Stock, president, Alan Weber, vice president, Theresa Canepa, treasurer, Joan Pease, secretary, and Sam Harrison, Jack Skillicorn, Judy Self, Kathy Baker, Gary Ibsen, Dwight Marshall, George Shorey and Stan McClelland.

The MFF Guild is headed by David Watkins and active members are welcome. There are many needs: a telephone tree, a gofer group, ticket sales, organizing events, distributing posters and brochures, encouraging merchants to feature festival displays and a network to talk MFF to everyone. To get involved call 624-2274.

Remember the MFF is a non-profit corporation administered by experienced business professionals and supported by volunteers, and their primary economic resource is through sponsors, advertisers and members. Corporate sponsorships are necessary. La Reina Chardonnay has been named the official sponsor for the first festival. Joining with The Monterey Vineyard are United Airlines, Monterey Sheraton Hotel and Smith & Hook Winery.

PALM SPRINGS AND LOS ANGELES

Holidays are a time for getting away from-routines (that press down on all of us) and, in our case, to do a little museum-hopping. The highlight of our leisurely stay in warm, sunny and beautiful Palm Springs was a visit to the Palm Springs Desert Museum to view the William Holden Collection, which was displayed beautifully in a large gallery next to the Annenberg Theatre.

His collection spanned a period from the 10th century to the 20th century. Represented were various cultures from the East: Nepal, Vietnam, Cambodia, Burma, Thailand, China...to Africa: Egypt, Nigeria, Zaire, Ethiopia and Kenya, of course, where he was owner of the Mount Kenya Safari Club, (which we found to be a beautiful lodge with white peacocks roaming around). Also included was Greece with a vase from 500 B.C.

The world benefits from Mr. Holden's interest in the fine arts as well as his art in movie making.

We also had a nice phone conversation with Bob Cannon (who formerly owned the Clock Garden Restaurant here), and he is still vitally interested in this area where he lived so long. He sends his best to all of his friends.

We departed P.S. to make room for President and Mrs. Reagan.

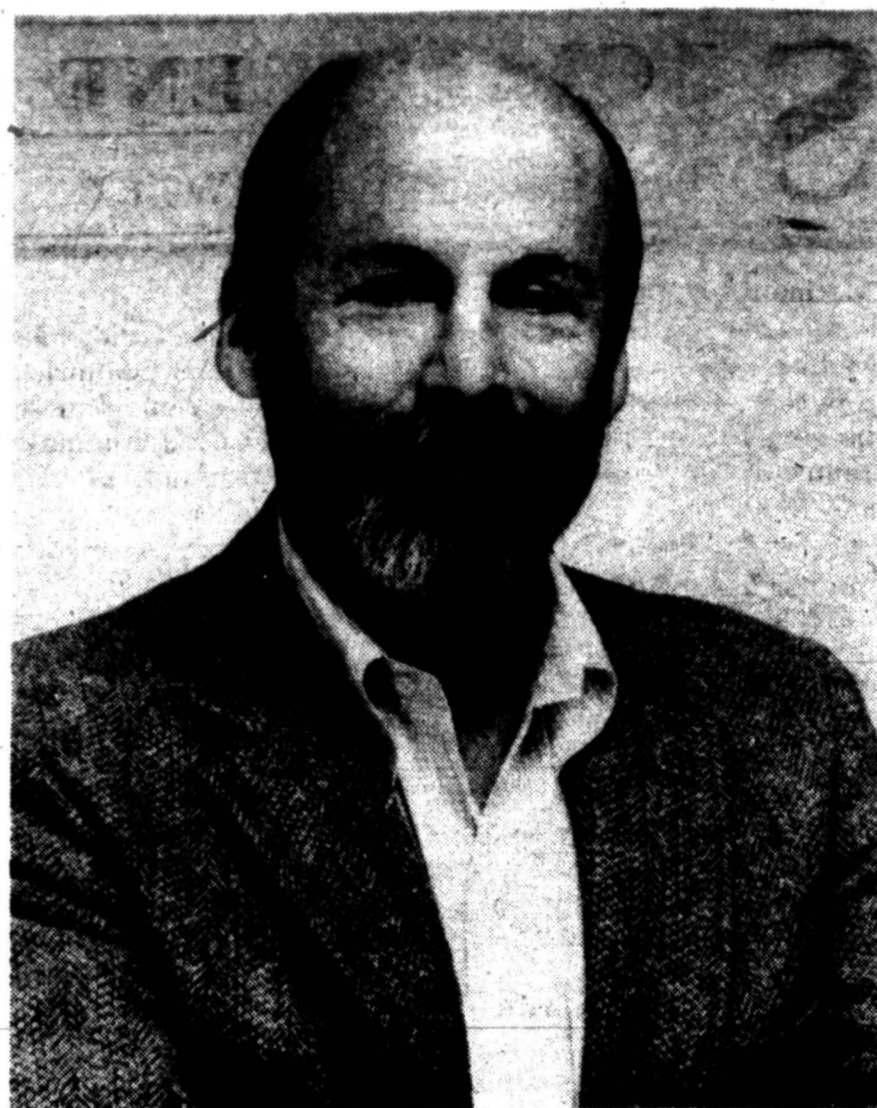

LOS ANGELES: We have gone to LA so many times but never found a day to attend the J. Paul Getty Museum in Santa Monica until this sojourn. The buildings and gardens are spectacular and from the front there is a realtor's peek at the ocean down below.

However, with all those zillions and zillions, we were a little put off by volunteer docents working for nothing, and by the poor quality in the cafeteria. As long as visitors pay for lunch, couldn't they afford ripe fruit? Of course, parking and museum entrances are free (but must be booked ahead, which is a good idea).

Along with Mr. G's love of Greek and Roman art was a room of Edward Weston photographs.

In downtown LA we went to MOCA (Museum of Contemporary Art) and were underwhelmed by the building (that LA went ga-ga over) and the art, which is warmed-over

CARMEL VALLEY RESIDENTS HONORED

Margarite Alvarez, co-owner of Country Home Care, Carmel and Salinas, has been honored by the California Association of Personnel Consultants.

Alvarez was recognized for her efforts to secure legislation requiring that all persons sent out by licensed agencies to provide home health care be Certified Nurses' Assistants.

The award was presented at the Association's annual conference in Monterey in November.

"Virtually everyone who required home care does so because of some medical condition. The largest number of home care recipients are long-term, but not seriously ill patients. Therefore, they are most likely to require assistance. We believe all people providing this care should have certain training and certification. That's the thrust of our lobbying activity," Alvarez states.

Alvarez and her partner, Judy Higerson, R.N., own and manage the largest licensed home health care registry on the Monterey Peninsula. They require certification for all nurses' assistants.

Alvarez is a resident of Carmel Valley.

CARMEL RESIDENT JOINS STAFF OF CAMPUS CRUSADE

Geoff Blakeslee, 31, of Carmel, and his wife, Kim, a native of Carmichael, were among 257 persons recently joining the staff of Campus Crusade for Christ International, an interdenominational Christian organization based here.

The Blakeslees completed the organization's summer new-staff training held at Arrowhead Springs Christian Conference and Retreat Center.

Founded in 1951, Campus Crusade for Christ has approximately 16,000 full-time and associate staff of many nationalities involved in Christian outreach in 150 countries and protectorates around the world.

Blakeslee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Blakeslee of Carmel, will work at the organization's International Headquarters in San Bernardino. The staff of the International Headquarters devote their professional skills to help the worldwide ministry function smoothly and efficiently.

He graduated from Carmel High School, then earned a degree in child development at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. They attend Calvary Chapel in Pacific Grove.

"We wanted to invest our lives where God could use us to help the greatest number of people come to know and love Him," explained Blakeslee when asked why they joined Campus Crusade for Christ.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

"When young we tend to view aging as something exciting, eagerly anticipating growing up, and when old-facing physical decline—as something depressing. With typical human perversity, we nearly always want to be an age we are not."

— Desmond Morris

Do you enjoy visiting museums and art galleries? If so, you're not alone. According to a survey taken recently by the Louis Harris polling organization, the proportion of people aged 65 and older who visit art museums, art galleries and historical museums has more than doubled over the last five years.

Frank Lloyd Wright, considered by many people to have been America's most important architect, created one of his masterpieces, the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum in New York City, when he was almost 90 years old.

Remember When? January 31, 1950 - President Harry Truman ordered the development of the hydrogen bomb.

FATHER FARRELL'S WISDOM

God governs in the affairs of man

Invocation to the Carmel Rotary Jan. 13, 1982

When the city of Monterey was only 17 years old, 195 years ago, that incredible American, 80 years old, Benjamin Franklin, spoke at the Constitutional Convention. "The longer I live, the more convincing proofs I see in this truth, that God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured in Sacred Writings that 'except the Lord, build the House, they labor in vain that build it.' I firmly believe this; and I also believe that without His concurring aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel; we shall be divided by our little partial, local interests, and our projects will be confounded." Later he said, "This government can only end in despotism, as others have done before when the people shall become so corrupted as to need despotic government, being incapable of any other."

Some 60-odd years ago when I was a lad, Carmel had one policeman, Chief Gus Englund. He and his horse were as cherished as that Lone Cypress. Today, there are more crimes committed in Carmel in a week than were committed in the whole of Monterey County in a year, a half-century ago. With justifiable concern, we ask what has happened when we cannot walk our streets in safety by day or by night? It has become more dangerous to leave our barred and burglar-proofed homes than it was for the early settlers to leave Ft. Apache during Geronimo's wildest depredations.

Oh, Lord grant us whatever it takes to bring peace, order, safety and tranquility to our troubled communities and nation. Help us to reform every facet of government without reverting to despotism which Benjamin Franklin tells us is inevitable unless we curb corruption. Finally, apropos to nothing except that Benjamin Franklin proposed that our national bird be the turkey, we repeat the words emblazoned on a Christmas T-shirt "It's hard to soar like an eagle when you're living with turkeys."

'Great Diamond Hoax' recalled

The Diamond Hoax of 1870s San Francisco will be the subject of the Monday, Jan. 12 meeting of the Monterey County Corral of Westerners. Speaker will be Raymond L. Kelly, professor emeritus of physics who is also knowledgeable about the American West.

John's Parish Hall, Mark Thomas Drive and Josselyn Canyon Road, Monterey.

A potluck dinner at 7 p.m. is followed by the program at 8. Admission is free. For details, call 624-4490 or 624-4598.

'Panegyric' set in Valley

Centennial year celebrates works of Robinson Jeffers

By ANNE PAPINEAU

"Cut humanity out of my being.
That is the wound that festers."

— Robinson Jeffers

AN INTENSELY private man, Robinson Jeffers found refuge and a window on nature at Tor House, the stone home he built on Carmel Point.

The poet died in 1962, to be survived by his literary and architectural legacy. And on Saturday, Jan. 10, the 100th anniversary of his birth, the man will be given renewed life as well. In Carmel Valley, the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation will present its annual panegyric, an evening of remembrance that takes its name from the Greek for "a meeting of high praise."

Those expected to participate include Dame Judith Anderson, for whom Jeffers penned his Medea; Leigh Wiener, a Hollywood portrait photographer who also counted Jeffers among his subjects, and the poet Robert Hass. At press time reservations could still be made for the panegyric by calling the foundation at 624-1813.

The Jeffers centennial will be marked with remembrances around the country, but Carmel, his home and workplace from 1919 until his death, remains the focus of tribute.

George White, president of the Tor House Foundation, recalls that he first encountered the works of Jeffers while a student at the University of Pennsylvania half a century ago.

Jeffers was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Jan. 10, 1887, and as White noted, "He was very, very famous in the late '20s and early '30s. He had his portrait on the cover of Time in the '30s."

Jeffers' writings include Tamar, Roan Stallion, Give Your Heart to the Hawks and an adaptation of Euripides' Medea.

According to White, "A couple of academicians took out after him, and he went from famous to notorious to neglected."

Beyond the centennial celebrations of Jeffers' writings that will take place this year, a rediscovery of his poetry is already in progress.

"Jeffers writes of subjects young people are interested in," observed White, a veteran publisher and college professor who makes his home in Carmel Valley. "He writes of protection of the environment and of wildlife. He was not a hunter but a bird and animal watcher. He writes of rocks, the sea, the sky and the stars. He does not believe that man is the center of the universe, but that man has caused more disaster on earth."

White added, "He was not a misanthrope or a recluse. His philosophy was that the permanent things were the beauty of the rocks and the beauty of the sea. The thing that is impermanent is man."

Demonstrating this rebirth of interest in Jeffers' writings is the Stanford University Press, which signed with Jeffers Literary Properties to publish The Complete Works of Robinson Jeffers.

"A conscious effort has been made to get Jeffers' work back in print," White said, noting that save for rare first editions some Jeffers' writings have long been unavailable. First installment of the four-volume Complete Works is expected to be out this year. It is edited by Jeffers' scholar Timothy Hunt of Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne.

"I know of six or seven doctoral dissertations being written now on Jeffers," White added.

Out-of-state celebrations of Jeffers included a dramatic presentation last November mounted by stage and film actor Jason Miller. Appearing at Carnegie Lecture Hall in Pittsburgh, Miller read excerpts from Selected Poems, The Beginning and the End and The Hungerfield. Miller, himself author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning play That Championship Season, chose poems that reflect Jeffers' themes about the decline of civilization, isolation of the artist, the tendency of man to contribute to his own destruction and the final consolation of the family and poetry.

The presentation was part of the International Poetry Forum, and the Tor House Foundation helped underwrite it.

"The second gun will be fired about Jan. 15," White quipped, noting that mid-month the Library of Congress will sponsor a reading of Jeffers' poetry. Coincidentally, the poet served as a consultant to the Library of Congress for one year.

This spring American Poetry Magazine will devote an entire issue to Jeffers. His alma mater, Occidental College, also plans a series of tributes.

The Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation will continue its Carmel tradition of organizing a garden party at Tor House in May and the Robinson Jeffers Tor House

QUARRIED TILE, hand-hewn beams and carefully crafted furniture punctuate Tor House, the Carmel Point home built by poet Robinson Jeffers. Jeffers shared the home with his family from 1919 until his death in 1962. It is now operated by the Tor House Foundation and is listed in the National Register of Historic Places. (Holly McFarland photo).

Festival will return Oct. 3-5.

"The foundation has been a godsend really for Jeffers. It has brought him back to the attention of the public, and he's worth reading," White said.

During his lifetime, the citizens of Carmel sometimes appeared ambivalent toward the builder of Tor House, which may have been to his liking.

"The residents couldn't lionize him, he wouldn't go to cocktail parties. You couldn't do a Clint Eastwood on him," White observed.

"He had no small talk. His son, Donnay, told me that Jeffers' brother, Hamilton, a distinguished astronomer, was also taciturn and quiet. Once Hamilton came to see Jeffers. They said hello and how are you and sat down in the living room. At the end of 40 minutes Hamilton got up and said, 'It was nice talking to you.'"

A much-educated man who attended schools in Switzerland, England and France, Jeffers attended each for no more than four or five months at time due to his father's displeasure with them. According to White, "It wasn't until he attended Occidental College in Pasadena that he made some friends."

"He was gaunt, but very strong. He went swimming outside his house every day of the year. He really was a genius but not interested in chit chat. He wrote every day and then built the house in the afternoon. In the evening he would read to the children. Una (Jeffers' wife) played organ in the house and would sing. About 11 p.m. he'd go outside and check on the universe."

The Tor House Foundation owns Tor House, which is affiliated with the National Trust for Historic Preservation. It is filled with the books, the furniture and even the musical instruments that Robinson and Una Jeffers collected.

"I am proud to say that the majority of the funding to support the foundation has been collected locally," noted its president. White added that a priority at Tor House is to collect $1,500 so that the Steinway piano which Una played can be not only tuned but also repaired.

He likened Tor House to Emily Dickinson's house in Amherst, Mass. Visitors can obtain a sense of how the poets lived, and see where the majority of their writing was accomplished.

ARTS & LEISURE

Tor House and Hawk Tower are open 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Reservations are required since docents can lead only a limited number of visitors through the narrow staircases and tower that Jeffers built with his own hands.

Saturday's panegyric, which includes dinner, will be presented at Hacienda Carmel in Carmel Valley. Cocktails will be served at 6 p.m. and dinner will be served at 7. Those attending will be encouraged to share reminiscences, anecdotes and favorite poetry and prose by and about Jeffers.

Tickets are $20 and can be made by calling the foundation office, 624-1813.

LOCATED ON OCEAN View Boulevard off Carmel Point in Carmel, Robinson Jeffers' Tor House and Hawk Tower are open to the public 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Reservations are required and can be made by calling the Tor House Foundation office, 624-1813. (Holly McFarland photograph).

THE 100TH anniversary of the birth of poet Robinson Jeffers will be commemorated Saturday, Jan. 10, with a dinner and panegyric, or gathering of praise. Dame Judith Anderson, who portrayed Medea in Jeffers' interpretation of the play, is among those who are expected to participate. For ticket information, call 624-1813. (Julian P. Graham photo).

Play gives new voice to John Steinbeck

By ANNE PAPINEAU

JAMES NISBET Clark calls himself "a student of John Steinbeck."

"I'm a Steinbeck student. Scholar is two steps ahead of me," he explained.

Granted permission by the Nobel Prize-winning author's literary agents, McIntosh and Otis Inc., Clark has devised John Steinbeck — A Quest of Genius, A Dramatic Illustration of Character with Songs. After presenting his one-man show during the Steinbeck Festival VII last year in Salinas, Clark is now taking it on the road — or over the hill at least to Sunset Center in Carmel.

His John Steinbeck... will play Fridays and Saturdays, Jan. 9 and 10, 16 and 17 in Carpenter Hall.

Clark is a veteran of New York and local theater. He directed the Staff Players Repertory Company production of Jacques Brel is ... at the Forest Theater, and reviews plays for the Salinas Californian.

"I'm not portraying him," Clark explained of his tribute to Salinas' most famous native son. "I present him as a student and a fan. I don't try to take on his personality. I try to emotionally justify his words."

Clark balks at his production being termed an adaptation, since "adapted implies altered. I haven't altered anything. The theme is his. It's primarily one of defending individual freedom."

Making use of the extensive collection of Steinbeck writings housed at the main library in Salinas, Clark assembled a Steinbeck tribute that underscores some of the author's lesser-known work.

"I quote from his Nobel Prize acceptance speech, as well as letters, stories and six songs from the teens, '20s and '30s which are used as breathers," he said.

"One of the reasons I like this program is I think it sets straight some of the misconceptions about Steinbeck, the local prejudices. I'm a very pro-Steinbeck human being. I think he stood for a great many things: intellectual and artistic freedom, individual strength, creativity, compassion and human love," Clark asserted.

Clark, like John Steinbeck, grew up in Salinas.

"You couldn't not be aware of him. We had a joke, that we went to high school with Steinbeck. We found out that the current Salinas High School campus was built after his time," he recalled.

Many of Steinbeck's major works, including The Grapes of Wrath, Tortilla Flat and Of Mice and Men were penned during the depression years, and the author often drew criticism from the Salinas establishment for his views.

"Misconceptions about him grew out of the times," Clark maintained. "When he stood for the downtrodden in the '30s, there was a natural friction between the haves and have-nots. He stood up for the have-nots. He also had a strong manifestation of defensive ego which rubbed people the wrong way."

As a writer for newspapers himself, Clark reserves awe for the sheer volume of writing accomplished by Steinbeck.

"The amount that he wrote is incredible — the fiction, newspaper and magazine articles. His accumulated work is immense," he said.

Clark researched Steinbeck's work for two years and memorized nearly an hour of writings to produce John Steinbeck — A Quest of Genius.

Any profits that result from the production, Clark said, will be donated to Amnesty International and to Steinbeck Festival VIII, which will be presented this spring in Salinas.

"His work underscored the principles of Amnesty International. I quote from a Radio Free Europe speech that Steinbeck made against totalitarianism. He states there is a strong, revolutionary striving for freedom of individual creativity. There is also a lot of comedy within the program. He had wonderful comedic bits, but things that people haven't heard before. By choice I'm bringing something new to the public."

JAMES NISBET Clark devised John Steinbeck — A Quest of Genius, using many of the author's lesser-known writings and speeches. It opens at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 9, in Carpenter Hall of Sunset Center, Carmel.

John Steinbeck — A Quest of Genius will be staged at 8 p.m. on two successive Fridays and Saturdays starting Jan. 9. It will be presented in Carpenter Hall of Sunset

'When he stood for the downtrodden in the '30s, there was a natural friction between the haves and have-nots. He stood up for the have-nots. He also had a strong manifestation of defensive ego which rubbed people the wrong way.'

Soviet Emigre Orchestra performs

THE SOVIET EMIGRE Orchestra will perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 14, at Sunset Theater, San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue, Carmel. Admission is $12.50.

The Soviet Emigre Orchestra was formed in 1979 as part of a music festival celebrating the artistry of performers who had left the Soviet Union in order to enjoy greater personal and artistic freedom. The chamber group created out of this event was immediately recognized for its "luxurious, passionate and golden" sound, which touched and inspired audiences.

Under the leadership of Lazar Gosman, the orchestra captured the imagination and support of an international audience, and members of the orchestra now include many Soviet emigre musicians originally from such cities as Moscow, Leningrad, and Odessa.

In its debut season, the orchestra played seven times at Carnegie Hall and appeared at Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall, the Philadelphia Academy of Music, Princeton's McCarter Theatre and at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. The following year, the orchestra founded the Ticonderoga, N.Y. Music Festival.

Performances in South America in 1982 excited both listeners and critics and led to a return tour in August of 1984. The orchestra's European debut in 1983 received critical acclaim, and in 1984 the group returned to fill houses in Switzerland, Austria, England, Italy, Germany, and Holland.

In 1985-86, the orchestra's appearances included concerts in Boston, at Lincoln Center and at Town Hall in New York, and a tour of the Northwest.

Musical Passage, a full-length documentary about the orchestra, reveals how Lazar Gosman came to America and founded the Soviet Emigre Orchestra. The film, which was released in 1984, received positive reviews from New York City critics and has toured the country.

The documentary provides insight into the experiences of emigres from the Soviet Union as the film follows the orchestra on tour throughout America, culminating in its concerts at Carnegie Hall.

MUSIC CORNER

BY JO ANN LA TORRA

Carmel Mission organ ambitiously tested

'BACH AND FRIENDS,' an organ concert presented by James Welch at the Carmel Mission Basilica, clearly demonstrated that there is more than one way to get high on New Year's Eve. Furthermore, this way proved cheap, safe and had no deleterious side effects.

In a program designed to entertain, Welch played to a full house on the stunning new pipe organ. Although the music was mostly 18th century, with excursions to the 16th, 17th and 20th centuries, it had great variety. And, although there were light pieces alternating with the meatier ones, there was no compromise with quality.

Three of the nine Sebastian Bach selections were, for me, totally satisfying: a movement from the C major Trio Sonata, a marvellous chorale prelude on "Nun freu euch...", and the E flat major Prelude and Fugue ("St. Anne").

Welch opened with a Trumpet Voluntary by John Stanley (18th century) which demonstrated the wonderful reed stops on this instrument. Two other, small, but charming, pieces utilized the reeds — Noel Provencale by Balbastre, and a sonata by Sousa Garvalho. Tower Hill, by Giles Farnaby (16th century), showed off the flute choir.

Les Petites Cloches by Richard Purvis, formerly organist at Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, employed the tinkling cymbelstern. The echo organ was demonstrated by a short work of Samuel Scheidt (17th century).

Thus, over the course of the program, Welch demonstrated the new organ, many different aspects of Sebastian Bach's compositional technique, and his own virtuosity and musicianship.

The arrangement of "Bist du bei mir" that Welch played was curious. Like so many of the works in Anna Magdalena's Notebook, the melody seems to have been borrowed from another composer and given a figured bass by Bach. This arrangement made of it a much bigger piece than the simple little tune could sustain. Also, the "Jig" Fugue had been classified a "spuriosity" by the Bach scholars, which made absolutely no difference to the enjoyment of it.

Welch was joined by the mission organist, Edward Soberanes, in a performance of a work by the lowly gifted P.D.Q. Bach, an offspring who sprang too far off. Of interest mostly to hysterical musicology, the "O.K. Chorale" (from Toot Suite) is what the Spanish composers might have called an ensalada, i.e., comprised of other compositions. Now this is a legitimate compositional technique, and was popular in the Baroque era, being known also as quodlibet and pasticcio, depending on certain details. But P.D.Q. being of dubious character (he was known to imbibe a bit) as well as talent, did not always acknowledge his sources. He also tended to rely on this technique virtually to the exclusion of any others.

In a triumph of style over content, the two organists gave possibly the definite performance of the work. Still, I heard some well-bred titters.

Welch's playing is generally very fine. Unlike many organists who constantly strive for legato lines, he is not afraid to use articulations generally more associated with string or harpsichord technique, and even to play staccato now and then. The result is a wonderful selection of phrasings and articulations that enliven his playing considerably.

The only discernible weakness the other night was an occasional lapse of rhythmic control, usually due to a slight vagueness at the beginning of a phrase or figure. One hopes this does not develop into a mannerism.

Massive ritards (slowing) at the end of every piece are so common now as to be quiet taken for granted. However, Sebastian's son, Emanuel, discusses this, along with tempo rubato, and is by no means in favor of it, especially in quick tempos. Some experimenting with this often yields surprising and gratifying results.

This was a wonderful concert for children, and there were a number of them present. I am very much in favor of taking children to "legitimate" concerts; the only way they will learn to like "classical" music is by being exposed to the best. Giving them music either to learn or to listen to that would insult the intelligence of a meerkat only teaches them that music is not very interesting.

Most concerts are too long for most children (even for many adults), so let them leave when they have had enough. It is true this is not always feasible financially, but some concerts are reasonable enough that parents do not have to feel anything was wasted.

Welch's informal comments were short and to the point and, with few exceptions, would have been accessible to many youngsters. Better anyway to have them struggle with the meaning of "triple fugue" than to receive the kind of cute, but often inaccurate, comments that may accompany the standard children's concert.

James Welch can be heard again on Jan. 25 on the Monarch Concert Series in Pacific Grove. The organ at First United Methodist church is totally different from the Mission organ, and the program will also be.

Businessman studies alternatives to war

In continuing its examination of alternatives to war, The New Forum, Carmel, presents Donald Carlson at its monthly luncheon, scheduled noon Wednesday, Jan. 14 at the Lodge at Pebble Beach.

Carlson has built one the nation's largest real estate investment firms and been described as a "card-carrying capitalist" by the media. As a practical and businesslike man, he has turned his energies to the subject of world peace.

Asserting that international relations and the prospects of nuclear war are issues simply too important to be left in the hands of politicians, Carlson is a founding member of Business Executives for National Security, a watchdog group organized from his extensive business contacts for the purpose of reducing fraud and waste in national defense spending.

Carlson also is a founder of Ark Communications, a group he says attracts a cross-section of bi-partisan, liberal and conservative interests. Designed primarily to cross international cultural and ideological barriers, Ark serves as an umbrella to a variety of programs aimed at improving world conditions, socially and environmentally as well as politically.

His address to the New Forum will focus on how individual citizens can make a difference in the direction of the world's future.

Reservation for the luncheon are $13 and must be made in advance by writing: The New Forum, P.O. Box 22214, Carmel, Ca. 93922; or by calling May Waldroup at 624-8886.

Violinist solos with symphony

VIOLINIST Miriam Fried, the first woman to win the Queen Elizabeth Competition in Brussels and the first prize winner of the Paganini Competition, will be the soloist with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in its January set of concerts.

The orchestra, under the baton of Clark E. Suttle, music director and conductor, will perform in Monterey, Carmel and Salinas Sunday through Tuesday, Jan. 11, 12 and 13.

Miriam Fried will be featured in Sibelius'

VIOLINIST MIRIAM Fried, once described as "one of the great violinists of this age," will perform with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra in its January series.

Concerto in D Minor for Violin. The orchestra also will play Mozart's Symphony No. 36 in C Major, K. 425, the "Linz," Ravel's Le Tombeau de Couperin, and Richard Strauss' "Don Juan."

Josef Gingold, the pre-eminent violin teacher at Indiana University, describes her as "one of the great violinists of this age."

Music critics agree. They have acclaimed her technical mastery, musical imagination and fresh humane approach which "make the violin repertoire sparkle." The San Francisco Chronicle says "Fried has a grand tone. She fills the hall with generous, deep tone. In a dreamy obbligato her music is on a cloud and she takes the listener up with it. Her performance of brilliant and intricate passages is stunning."

The Washington Post calls her performances "full of fresh insights and precisely focused conceptions. The Denver Post says "she gives a performance a momentous quality. She projects...lines with fervor and richness...with intensity. She pours out a rich, dark sound." The Knoxville Journal wrote: "She comes to a concert with a quiver filled with emotional arrows. Playing her Stradivarius to near perfection, she does not miss a shot."

The Houston Post says that "her passionate but tonally focused, technically accomplished playing (results) in a remarkably clear, communicative and poignant interpretation of the solo line."

Strad Magazine writes that her playing is a "blend of expressive power and formidable control" and the Providence Journal-Bulletin says her performances have a "nightingale purity; her beautifully tempered vibrato is as effortless and as benificent as a songbird."

She has toured Spain, Finland, Italy, Switzerland, Germany and England with such orchestras as the Royal Philharmonic and the Israel Chamber Orchestra.

The Monterey County Symphony performs Sundays at King Hall, the Naval Post Graduate School, Monterey; Mondays at Sunset Center, Carmel; and Tuesdays at Sherwood Hall, Salinas. All concerts begin at 8 p.m.

For ticket information, call the symphony office at 624-8511. Prices range from $4.50 to $12. Subscribers can still take advantage of a mini-season, four-concert series at substantial savings.

Single tickets are available at Abinante in Monterey; Do Re Mi in the Barnyard; and Gadsby's and Sherwood Hall Box Office in Salinas.

CAA teams watercolorists, multi-media designs

TWO EXHIBITIONS debut this month in the galleries of the Carmel Art Association. Recent works by Karen Nagano will be featured in the Center Gallery, and in the Beardsley Gallery an all-watercolor show by CAA members will be on display.

Minnesota-born Karen Nagano studied at Stanford University under such artists as Nathan Oliveira, Richard Diebenkorn, Frank Lobdell and Keith Boyle. Her college years included a year of study in Japan.

Nagano's work and education have continued. Stints at the universities of California at Berkeley and Santa Barbara permitted her to work with George Miyasaki, William Dole, James Jarvise and Adja Yunkers in the studio, and with Dore Ashton in art criticism and aesthetics. She recently spent a summer working with Gordon Ilchuk, master printer from UC Santa Barbara.

Nagano lives and works in Carmel. She employs several media, including gouache, watercolor, colored pencil, metallic paint and oils. Her etchings are combinations of line, soft-ground transfers and aquatint. Some series are hand-painted individually after printing and drying.

The Carmel Art Association is located on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, Carmel. These concurrent shows will run from Thursday, Jan. 8, through Feb. 4. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For details, call 624-6176.

KIYOOMI'S WORLD, a 40-by-26-inch watercolor and gold leaf design, is among the works by Karen Nagano that will be exhibited at the Carmel Art Association this month.

BIG SUR RESIDENCE in SANTA LUCIA COASTLANDS

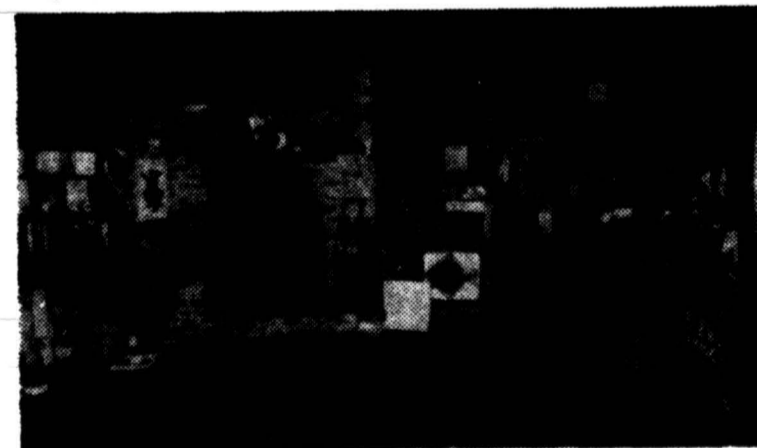

Santa Lucia Coastlands, established as a choice Sur Coast residential area over a half-century ago, was carved from an especially dramatic portion of the Post Homestead Family's famed Rancho Sierra Mar. This delightful residence follows the upper contours of its three acre site, looking across stands of canyon redwoods, along the vast, majestic South Sur Coastline for almost 70 miles. Near Nepenthe and Ventana, this private community is readily accessible to California's first Scenic Highway leading to Monterey Peninsula, about 30 miles northwards, as well as San Francisco and Los Angeles, more distant.

The above view of the residence provides some idea of the single wall, board and batt constructed home which rambles along the contoured hillside at about 600' above the Pacific Ocean. Like the majority of older homes in Coastlands, this one has been remodelled to include several additions. It's 1800 sq. ft. includes 4 bedrooms and 2 1/2 baths, providing considerable flexibility in usage. South-facing brick patios look out over the steep hillside extending down into redwood canyons. Space is available for parking and limited gardening.

From the central patio, pictured above, not only miles of magnificent south coast views, encompassing surf-fringed shoreline, but also the sweep of the Santa Lucia Mountains to the east, are constant delights. To the left of the patio is the living room with views across the patio and along the coastline. At the far end of the patio is a guest suite, including a small bedroom, 1 1/2 baths, large study and it's own private patio. From a small office/library off the living room, stairs lead to the three second floor bedrooms, bath and sunny deck with ocean and mountain views.

An alcove kitchen and small dining area open onto the comfortable living room - which centers around a slightly raised brick fireplace. Built-in bookshelves line the north wall while sliding glass doors and windows on the south wall afford views of mountains, ocean and coastline. This property is priced at $350,000. with cash required. The estate sale is subject to court confirmation.
